19TH YEAR. NO. 280. EAST LIVERPOOL, O., WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 26, 1902—TWELVE PAGES. TWO CENTS.

SUIT AGAINST C. A. SMITH DECIDED IN HIS FAVOR IN THE COURT AT LISBON

Judge Holds That the Dissatisfied Mine Stockholders Have No Ground on Which to Stand.

A decision was handed down in common pleas court yesterday by Judge W. W. Hole, in which the citizens of East Liverpool generally are much interested.

July 17, 1902, J. G. English, of Danville, Ill., and J. F. English, of Sumter, Ore., filed a suit in common pleas court against C. A. Smith, of East Liverpool and Pittsburg, for $343,907.12 damages. The plaintiffs alleged in their petition that Smith took an option on 980,000 shares of the Golconda Mining company, of Sumter, Ore., and that he agreed to pay for the stock $400,000. When he took this option, it is alleged, the company was reorganized in Smith's interest and he was elected president.

The agreement was that Smith was to contribute to the mining company the sum of $3,500 per month for one year from January 29, 1901, to be used in sinking the shaft 100 feet deeper and otherwise developing the mine.

The plaintiffs' claims were that he sunk the shaft only 90 feet and left the mine in a greatly damaged and unsafe condition; that Smith used the receipts from the sale of gold to develop the mine instead of declaring a dividend and that he did not contribute $3,500 per month to the company; that he carried away assay certificates and machinery belonging to the company; that he never formally surrendered the option, but abandoned the mine on December 1, 1901, and that they took charge of the mine and declared the option at an end on March 5, 1902. They allege they were put to much expense and were unable to sell the stock to as good advantage as they otherwise might and claim that they were damaged by Smith's failure to comply with the agreement.

At the time the suit was filed Mr. Smith retained able counsel and at once filed a demurrer and from the decision of the court in this hearing, it would seem the claim of Mr. Smith made then was well founded. He insisted that the plaintiffs had suffered no considerable damage, and said that he had agreed to reimburse them for the loss, but that no satisfactory agreement could be made.

In his decision Judge Hole sustained the demurrer in detail with the exceptions.

SMALLPOX SCARE VERY SHORT LIVED

House Was Quarantined Last Night and the Quarantine Raised Today.

THREE PHYSICIANS CERTAIN

That the Patient Is Not Afflicted With the Disease, Though Another Doctor Thinks Otherwise—Mrs. Barnes the Sufferer.

There was a flurry of excitement in the city this morning when it became generally known that Mrs. Anna B. Barnes, of 167 Church alley, was placed under quarantine last evening at about 9 o'clock, she having showed signs of smallpox.

Mrs. Barnes was pronounced afflicted with the terrible disease by Dr. W. J. Taylor, and it was upon his report to Health Officer Ogden that the house was quarantined. This afternoon, however, after examination was made by Drs. Ogden, Clark and Harrison, a diagnosis was reported to the effect that that she is not suffering with smallpox and Sanitary Policeman Burgess was ordered to relieve the guards and remove the sign from the door of the house.

One physician holding that the woman has the disease and three that she has not, it seems pretty safe to let the matter drop and cease fearing.

Dr. Taylor, when interviewed this afternoon by a News Review reporter, said: "Yes, sir, I pronounced the woman sick with smallpox or variloid, which in reality is the same, it being only a mild form. I have had much experience with smallpox and I don't believe I could be deceived. However, if I am mistaken I am truly glad of it, because I fully realize what a smallpox scourge to the city would mean. The woman came to my office last night and I made a careful examination of her sickness.

"Two signs which always accompany the disease were much in evidence with her. The familiar fumes which come from a patient filled my room when she was in it. And when I felt her forehead I discovered a never-failing sign. Under the skin I could distinctly feel scores of little raisings which to me are like bird shot. I have never treated a smallpox case in my life that the same feeling was not in evidence. You can quote me as saying that the woman is sick with the smallpox."

Every preparation was made to protect the residents of the city against the disease had it developed as at first reported. Officer Burgess had arranged with Otto Schmidtbauer and Hamilton Dailey to keep watch at the house, and Mayor Davidson announced this morning that he intended calling a meeting of the board of health for tonight to take steps in regard to the people who had association with the woman during the past few days.

POTTS SQUARES HIMSELF

The Lawyer-Editor Expresses Regret At Having Attacked the Court.

Lisbon, November 26.—(Special)—Editor W. S. Potts, of the Patriot, squared himself with the court last evening, by publishing an article headed: Courts Should Be Respected," in which he expressed regret for having used the language to Judge Hole which appeared in his paper on Saturday.

A motion was filed yesterday afternoon for a new trial in the Kelly-McPherson damage suit. A date will be set soon on which to hear the arguments.

FOR THE PLAINTIFF

Judgment for $2,000 Was Given in Bradshaw Estate Case.

Lisbon, November 26.—(Special)—In the case of W. L. Smith, administrator of the Bradshaw estate in East Liverpool, a decision was given this morning by Judge Hole, the court holding that Theodore Bradshaw had made a warrantee deed to his mother in his life time for property mortgaged to its full value, and that, as the administrator had to pay this mortgage he had a right to collect the money paid from the party making the warranty deed, and judgment was rendered for the plaintiff for $2,000.

RULES NOT YET FIXED

Conference of Journeymen And Boss Barbers Accomplished Little.

The conference held last night between the barbers resulted in no lasting good to either side of the controversy. The joint committees agreed to fix the hour which should control tonight, and that all shops would remain closed tomorrow all day. No arrangements were made for a future meeting, and it is not likely one will be held.

As matters now stand there is no rules upon which to work as Thanksgiving, 1902, is the only definite arrangement made.

FOUR VICTIMS OF ROBBERY

Thieving Operations Carried On at Two Different Boarding Houses.

A BOARDER WHO SKIPPED

is Suspected In One Instance—Three Reports Having Lost a Bank Roll. Young Men Suffered Loss—Woman Of $40.

Two daring robberies which occurred in the city yesterday morning have been reported to Chief Thompson.

While three well known young men, William Boone, Mark Tuesberry and William Smith, were absent from their room at Mrs. Ella May Robinson's boarding house, 119 Seventh street, yesterday morning someone entered the apartment and stole valuables amounting to $50. The thieves ransacked every drawer, pocket, valise and trunk in the room and was at no time interrupted in his nefarious work. As a result of the theft Boone lost a gold watch and chain, valued at $36.50; Tuesberry a gold ring valued at $10 and Smith a revolver valued at $4. The exact hour that the robbery was committed is not known but it was after 9 o'clock and before noon.

When the three men went to their room at the noon hour they readily discovered that some one had been trifling with their belongings and upon an investigation discovered their loss.

They are confident that they know who the person is that stole from them, but as the suspect has left the city they do not expect him to be captured and they have given up thought of ever regaining their valuables.

The suspect arrived in the city last Friday from Beaver county, Pa., and applied at the Robinson boarding house for both board and lodging. He gave his name as Evans and said that he was a machinist by trade. He had no money and put off the landlady with the excuse that his trunk would be here in a few days and then he would have sufficient money. The man man left the city yesterday without notifying Mrs. Robinson and the conclusion is reached that he is the guilty party. The police have been given a true description of the man and have been ordered to arrest him if seen on the streets.

An unknown woman at police headquarters this morning stated that some individual entered her room, which is located in the old Davidson opera house yesterday morning and stole a roll of bills amounting to over $40. She has no idea who committed the theft and the police are absolutely without a clue. The act was done while she was in another part of the building. It is said that the woman is employed at the Wallace & Chetwynd pottery.

OHIO TAX LAWS AND CORPORATIONS

Reasons Assigned for the Numerous Charters Granted in West Virginia.

AN EAST LIVERPOOL CASE

Newell Purchase Taken By a Correspondent as an Indication That This City May Lose Its Potteries—Taxes Not Heavy.

"Despite the apparent success of the franchise tax laws of last winter," says a Columbus special to the Cincinnati Enquirer, "there lingers a doubt as to the ultimate effect as revenue raisers. It was only a day or two ago that a leading coal company reduced its capital stock from millions to a beggarly $150,000. The reports from West Virginia show that more Ohio concerns are obtaining charters there than ever before. But the strangest performance of Ohio capitalists up to date is shown by the incorporation of the American Manufacturing company of Chester, W. Va. The purpose of this company is to mill, mine and manufacture articles incident to or connected with the glassware, brick, porcelain and pottery business.

"The incorporators include well-known capitalists, stockholders and officials of the Laughlin China company, the Knowles, Taylor & Knowles company and the Knowles Pottery company, of East Liverpool, some of the individuals being W. E. Wells, E. M. Knowles, Colonel John N. Taylor, G. W. Clark and Joseph G. Lee, of that city. It is stated that these gentlemen, in connection with certain Pittsburg capitalists, intend to found a new pottery town on the West Virginia side of the Ohio river, opposite East Liverpool. They have paid $75,000 for 450 acres of land just below the little town of Chester and will begin work on the factory buildings as soon as possible.

"The conclusion reached by observers here is that these Ohio manufacturers desire to escape the heavy taxation that is now their portion in this state. There is plenty of land in the neighborhood of East Liverpool for the extension of their present plants. Should it mean the transference of the pottery industry to the other side of the river the blow would be a severe one to East Liverpool and Columbiana county, for both virtually depend upon it for prosperous conditions. Homer Laughlin, who is at the head of the china company bearing his name, is now virtually a resident of Los Angeles, Cal., where he lives in the baronial mansion erected by the late Dr. Leslie Keely, the founder of the "gold cure" for the drink habit. He has also erected a number of office buildings in the business section of the busiest city on the California coast outside of San Francisco."

Concerning the above the News Review's Columbus correspondent writes: "One of the political wiseacres at the state capital claims to see in the incorporation of the American Manufacturing company, of Chester, W. Va., under the laws of that state, a scheme on the part of the leading pottery manufacturers of East Liverpool to transfer their plants from that city to Chester for no other purpose than to escape the tax of one-tenth of 1 per cent imposed on corporations under the Willis law. The amount which the Knowles, Taylor & Knowles company pays under this tax is $1,000. Payment is made to the secretary of state and is by him transferred to the state treasury."

W. E. Wells, one of the officers of the new company was interviewed by a News Review reporter at noon today and said: "There doubtless have been a number of companies incorporated in West Virginia recently. They may have done so on account of the tax rates in Ohio, and it is possible many more may take out papers in that state on account of the iniquitous tax regulations."

FELL ON A TRAIN

A C. & P. Brakeman Got a Bad Fall And Painful Injuries.

Edward Burcaw, a brakeman, while running over the top of a freight train on the C. & P. railroad near Port Homer, had his knee badly injured by falling. In jumping from a box car to a gondola loaded with steel rails he fell, striking his knee on one of the rails, splitting the knee cap.

He was brought to East Liverpool and a physician dressed the injury. He was taken to his father's home near Calcutta. Mr. Burcaw is well known in Chester, having moved from there to his present home last spring.

TILT OF THREE COUNCILMEN ENLIVENS THE PROCEEDINGS AT CITY FATHERS' MEETING

Arrangements Will Be Effected Soon For Setting the New Code Machine in Operation.

The meeting of council was enlivened last night by a tilt between the two oldest members of the body, and the brisk interchange of words had a good effect upon the younger representatives. Whatever may be the faults of Uncle Joe Barlow, of the Second, lack of sincerity is not one of them, and when his word was questioned by George Peach, of the Third, Mr. Barlow sailed in and "trimmed him up properly." Uncle Joe had been arguing in favor of making amends for the damage to the property of Thomas Chadwick, of Lincoln avenue. This was not a new subject to Mr. Barlow. Many a time and often within the past few months he has explained to the council that something should be done with the Chadwick lot.

At the last meeting the engineer was instructed to prepare an estimate of the probable cost to the city of making the property safe, for the winter at least. Engineer Kelly had the figures ready last evening, and when he said about $192.50 would cover the expense, Uncle Joe and a majority of the members were in favor of going ahead with the work at once.

Mr. Marshall could not see the matter in any other light than a "graft," as he expressed it, and this did not have a tendency to make the Second ward member any easier in his mind. He allowed that when the subject of "grafts" suggested itself to a man, he must be a little "grafty" on his own account, and ventured the assertion that there had been others.

George Peach, of the Third ward, here rung in with the information that an appropriation for an improvement such as had been suggested would be illegal. He declared he would be as much in favor of doing something for the relief of Mr. Chadwick as anyone, but he did not purpose that illegal action should be taken.

"How about those little technicalities you have passed over, Mr. Peach? You know many illegal actions have been taken here," said Mr. Barlow.

Just at this point was where the fine works were due. Swinging his arms in the air, Mr. Peach defied the venerable Barlow to cite a case where he

MINE INSPECTOR MOVES QUARTERS

District Deputy Davis Has Moved From Dell Roy to Salem.

THE SALINEVILLE CHARTER

Lost to One of the Miners' Unions Probably Does Not End the Case The Men Objected to Working in Other Mines.

From a Staff Correspondent.

Columbus, November 26.—James P. Davis, deputy mine inspector for the Sixth district, composing the counties of Columbiana, Carroll, Mahoning, Portage, Trumbull and the township of Springfield in Jefferson county, has moved from Dell Roy, Carroll county, to Salem, which becomes headquarters of the district. His term expires next spring. Mr. Davis is on his second term. When State Mine Inspector Biddison took charge of the office two years ago last January he re-arranged the districts of the state and made one district out of portions of two districts in the southeastern part of the state, of which Mr. Davis and Reese T. Davis, of East Palestine, were deputy inspectors. Both were thrown into the same district and each applied for the deputyship. After considering the matter for several months State Inspector Biddison tendered the appointment to Mr. Davis, of Dell Roy. The salary is $1,200 per annum and expenses.

Secretary-Treasurer Savage, of the United Mine Workers of America, has returned from Salineville, where he went to secure the charter and seal of the local union, which was suspended for disobeying the orders of the organization. The members of the local refused to work with three Italians who were members in good standing of the state organization. The charter and seal were surrendered to the state official promptly. Mr. Savage said to the correspondent of this paper that he thought there would be more trouble and that the local would take steps to get reinstated. The Italians are working in another mine and he was assured that there would be no further discrimination against them. There are four other locals in Salineville, all in good standing.

Mr. Crew, a native of Butler township, Columbiana county, who is connected with the postmaster general's department at Washington, and Mr. Holloway, of Columbiana, employed in the postal department in this division, in company with five other postal officials, were in this city yesterday, inspecting mail catching cranes.

HOUSES STANDING IN THE STREET

Many Complaints About Two Buildings That Encumber City's Thoroughfares.

ONE HAS STOOD LONG TIME

On Jefferson Street Near Fifth—Law on the Subject Found—No Building to Stand in the Street More Than Three Days.

Mayor Davidson, Chief Thompson and City Clerk Davidson for more than ten days past have been bothered almost every hour in the day with remarks of censure concerning the allowing of a building to stand intact in the middle of Jefferson street, near Fifth street. This morning their attention was called to another building which adorns the public highway on West Market street.

The three officials in question have been unable to advise the many who have registered objections and have also refrained from any words of repudiation, due to the fact that none were confident of the stand which they could take in the matter. According to an ordinance in the ordinance book held by the mayor the owner of the building which stands at Jefferson and Fifth streets has committed no wrong and cannot be held liable. He received a permit from the city clerk to remove the house and that was deemed sufficitnt However, this morning the officials were prompted to scour the 400 or more ordinances that are contained in the ordinance book and by so doing they discovered one that will result either in the removal of the buildings or the city will look to the owner for damages. The ordinance was passed October 4, 1897, and is styled "An ordinance to regulate the removal of any building over or upon any of the streets, alleys or public grounds of said city."

The ordinance in full is as follows:

"Section 1.—Be it ordained and enacted by the council of the city of East Liverpool, two-thirds of all members concurring, that no erson or persons shall remove or cause to be removed on, along or across any street, alley or public way within said city any dwelling house, business house, stable of other structure without having first obtained from the city clerk a written permit to do so.

"Section 2.—Upon applying for such permit and before the same shall be issued the person or persons seeking the same shall file in the office of the city clerk a bond in the sum of $500, payable to the city of East Liverpool for use of the party injured and with sufficient sureties to be approved by the city clerk, conditional that said person or persons shall fully repair any or all damages done to said street or other city or private property by the removal of said building and shall save and keep harmless the said city from and expense, loss or damages that it may sustain by reason of said building. The person or persons receiving such permit shall exercise the same, subject to all other grants and franchises granted to others by any ordinance or resolution of council.

"Section 3.—No person or persons removing such buildings shall permit the same to remain on any particular block on any street or public way for a longer period than three days, and a good and sufficient passage way for one vehicle shall at all times be provided on one side of said building.

"Section 4.—Any person violating any of the provisions of this ordinance shall be fined not less than $50 and not more than $100 and the costs of prosecution."

With the above ordinance to act upon there is likely to be something doing. For the one located at the corner of Fifth and Jefferson streets the owner simply has a permit to move it, and the building has stood in one position at least three times the number of days legally allowed. The one standing in West Market street was placed there without the owner even securing a permit, it is said.

Mayor Davidson frankly admitted that he did not know that there was an ordinance such as the above. In regard to it he said: "It simply makes the argument which I have voiced for two years stronger. When my attention was called to the fact that the building was standing in the street, I referred to the ordinance book which I am supposed to consult when all like problems arise. In that book I could find nothing that would give me power to order the removal of the building. I tell you the ordinances of the city must be codified. I find if I want to be certain of any ordinance, that I have first before me the task of scanning the 400 ordinances which do not appear in the book. I have advocated a recodification of the ordinances and am satisfied that many things will run as they should not if my suggestion is not heeded and that very soon."

KILLED A THOUSAND

Great Record Made By Two Hunters, But It Was Not This Year.

Salem, November 26.—The publication of an item concerning the 75th birthday anniversary of Aaron Wilson last Saturday has called to Mr. Wilson's mind a reminiscence of a season's hunt some 25 years ago. At that time, which was before the present restrictions of season limit of number of quail were in force, Mr. Wilson and the late Charles I. Hayes were very fond of hunting.

For years Messrs. Hayes and Wilson had been in the habit of hunting together, and at the beginning of one fall season one suggested to the other that they keep a record and at the end of the season figure up the number of quail and pheasant they had bagged. Accordingly, a board was tacked up at Mr. Wilson's stable, and each evening when they returned from a hunt each would tally the number of birds he had killed that day. This was kept up through the season, at the end of which the number was added up and it was found that the two had killed a total of 965 quail and 77 pheasants during the season. They did not count the rabbits taken.

Albert Hayes, the son of C. I. Hayes, still has the old muzzle-loading fowling piece which his father used to hunt with. Mr. Wilson disposed of his gun years ago. The elder Mr. Hayes takes a keen delight in hunting, and during his lifetime went out hunting numerous times during the season. Mr. Wilson says that the gun owned by Mr. Hayes has, in its time, killed more game than any other gun in the state.

EAST END

Pleaded Guilty to Stone-Throwing When He Had Nothing to Do With the Case.

About ten days ago the passengers on a northbound C. & P. trains were badly frightened when a rock came crashing through a window while the train was passing the Smith & Phillips pottery. Both the trainmen and the passengers thought the missile had been thrown with a malicious intent. Several small boys were at play along the track and it was evident that it had been thrown by one of them. A railroad detective was notified of the occurrence and was provided with a description of one of these boys, Roy, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Mel Martin, of Calhoun's addition.

The detective went to the East End and captured the lad, who was so badly frightened that he thought the only way to save himself was to admit his guilt. Later it was found out that the boy had nothing at all to do with the affair and he was released. It is not likely that other arrests will be made, because of the meagre description of the guilty party.

Wanted Interest on $1.06.

The case of J. E. Forbes versus James Parker was heard yesterday afternoon by 'Squire Carman. The suit grew out of a load of coal which the plaintiff claimed he sold and delivered to the defendant in December of last year. The defendant claims that the coal in question was not delivered, but made a tender of $1.06. The amount asked was $1.06 with interest, so the tender was refused and the case went to trial. Attorney J. E. Davis represented the plaintiff and W. E. Warren the defendant. The plaintiff was allowed the amount of the tender.

Rummage Sale a Success.

The bazaar and rummage sale in the P. H. C. hall last evening given by the Ladies' Aid society and the Young Ladies' guild, of the Erie street M. E. church, was a big success in spite of the unfavorable weather. The hall was thronged during the evening and the ladies were kept busy serving refreshments and disposing of the articles on the rummage tables. The pieces of art needle work contributed by the young ladies found a ready sale. The proceeds will amount to about $50.

Lecture Will be Interesting.

The free lecture Thanksgiving evening at the Second Presbyterian church promises to be interesting and entertaining. The lecturer, Rev. Alexander Sharp, of Mingo, spent eight years in the northern and western countries of South America as a missionary, and his talk will be of the life, character and religion of these people. The opportunity will be presented for a free will thank offering at this service.

Have a New Horse.

The street committee of the city council has provided the East End fire station with an additional horse, something that has long been needed by this department. The new animal is a handsome gray about 15 hands high and four years old. He has not been broken yet for fire department work. Captain Terrence has named him George, in honor of Councilman Peach, chairman of the street committee.

Beatty Improving.

Metch Beatty, whose finger was amputated a few days ago as the result of an injury from a wire received in the slip room of the Standard pottery, is reported to be improving nicely. Blood poisoning had set in, making it necessary to amputate the member. It will be several weeks before he can return to work.

A Correction.

A typographical error yesterday made it appear that the Thanksgiving supper and entertainment to be given in the P. H. C. hall Thursday evening is under the auspices of the I. O. O. F. It should have read I. O. O. C. There is no organization of the former in the East End.

EAST END AFFAIRS.

Henry Chambers left this morning for Pittsburg.

Stomachs on Stilts.

The man who puts on stilts does not increase his actual stature by the breadth of a hair. He feels taller while he's on the stilts, and when he's off them he feels shorter than he ever felt. Stimulants are the stilts of the stomach. They make a man feel better for the time being, but he feels a great deal worse for them afterward.

The need of the man whose stomach is "weak" is not stimulation but strength. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery perfectly answers that need. It cures the diseases of the digestive and nutritive system which make the stomach "weak." It enables the digestion and assimilation of food, so that the body receives the nutrition on which depends its strength.

"I took two bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery for stomach trouble," writes Clarence Carnes, Esq., Taylorstown, Loudoun Co., Va. "It did me so much good that I didn't take any more. I can eat most anything now. I am so well pleased with it I hardly know how to thank you for your kind information. I tried a whole lot of things before I wrote to you. A gentleman told me of your medicine, and how it cured his wife. Thought I would try a bottle of it. Am now glad that I did, for I do not know what I should have done had it not been for Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery."

The sole motive for substitution is to permit the dealer to make the little more profit paid by the sale of less meritorious medicines. He gains; You lose. Therefore accept no substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery."

The sluggish liver is made active by the use of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets.

What to do Until the Doctor Arrives.

MEETING OF CABINET.

Cuban Reciprocity and Canal Treaty With Colombia Principally Discussed.

ALL MEMBERS PRESENT BUT ONE

Secretary Hay Unable to Report Progress in Canal Negotiations. Suggested that Colombia Hopes to Profit by Lapsing of Franchise.

Washington, Nov. 26.—The cabinet meeting yesterday was devoted almost exclusively to the consideration of the status of the reciprocity treaty with Cuba and the canal treaty with Colombia. The hitches that have occurred in the negotiations were discussed, as were also the prospects of settlement.

Secretary Hay, while presenting the subject of the canal negotiations to the cabinet, was not able to report that any progress had been made during the past week. In fact, it appears that the negotiations have come to a dead stop, and while no such thing as an ultimatum has passed the precise situations may be described in the statement that the Colombian minister here, Concha, has distinctly informed the state department that he cannot in behalf of his government accept the last proposition of the United States as a basis of a canal treaty. The state department has already let it be known that it has come to the end of its concessions, so the chances of a renewal of negotiations in the near future are not very bright.

This state of affairs will stimulate the negotiations with Nicaragua and Costa Rica for the alternate route, but it now appears that diplomats of those countries are not disposed to allow themselves to be used to coerce Colombia, and therefore are desirous of remaining in the background until it shall be clearly established that no treaty can be made between Colombia and the United States.

One of the statements of fact in connection with the Panama route which has been brought to the attention of the state department is that original canal concessions will expire in 1904, and it has been suggested that the Colombian government has that fact in mind and is disposed to refrain from making a treaty now in the expectation that the franchise will lapse and it thus may be in a position to build the canal itself or to sell a new concession. Such a course will raise a very serious question between the Colombian government, the Panama Canal company, the French government and the government of the United States as to whether or not a supplementary decree extending the concessions 10 years from 1904 was valid.

President Roosevelt laid before the cabinet his annual message to congress in completed form. It was sent to the printer yesterday. Most of the features of the document were familiar to the members of the cabinet and only such parts of the message as had not been considered previously were read in full. All the members were present except Secretary Root.

Other Washington News.

The President and Mrs. Roosevelt entertained a large party of friends at dinner at the White House last night.

Charles V. Herdliska, United States consul at Callao, Peru, has tendered his resignation and it has been accepted.

Madame Duse, the Italian actress, was received by the president and Mrs. Roosevelt yesterday at the White House.

Brigadier General Charles C. Hood has been relieved at his own request. His successor will not be selected until congress meets.

Midshipman Aiken, who was injured in the Annapolis-Bucknell football game 10 days ago, was reported better yesterday, and hopes are now entertained for his recovery.

The remains of three officers of the army were interred in the Arlington national cemetery yesterday with the usual military ceremonies. These were Major Walter Reed, of the medical department; Captain John F. McBlain, Ninth cavalry, and Captain J. Y. Slow, a quartermaster of volunteers during the Civil War.

Justice Harlan, of the United States supreme court, on Dec. 9, will have completed 25 years of service as a member of that court, and his friends at the bar throughout the country have arranged to express their appreciation of his services by a dinner in his honor on that evening at the new Williard hotel in this city.

A cablegram received at the state department yesterday from Minister Squiers, at Havana, reports that the government is taking a firm stand and that the strike situation is better. The conditions in Havana are being watched with the closest interest here, as it is believed the Cuban government is about to be subjected to a severe test.

REASONS FOR GIVING THANKS.

Thanksgiving day, first celebrated almost 300 years ago by a little band of Puritans at Plymouth, is now observed in every country on earth where Americans have a permanent or even a temporary abiding-place. A purely American festival, its observance has become world-wide. The miners of Alaska, the soldiers in the Philippines, the citizens of Hawaii and Porto Rico, the American oil well drillers in Russia, the pioneers in new industrial enterprises in Africa and South America, will all celebrate the day with the same zest that marks the observance of the festival at home. Eeven in the government house at Calcutta, where a titled lady of American birth presides, there will be a Thanksgiving feast that will rival the best in the United States. Thanksgiving day will be the occasions for family reunions in every city, village and hamlet throughout the land and in scattered farm houses everywhere in the United States. It was instituted primarily as a farmers' festival, a period for rejoicing and expressing gratitude to Providence for good crops and other gifts that mean happiness and comfort to the recipients. It is still, in many a farm house, the one day of all the year most eagerly looked forward to by young and old and most feelingly and happily celebrated.

A contented mind and a sense of gratitude for manifold blessings are all that are necessary to the proper observance and proper enjoyment of the national festival. And nowhere in the world does contentment reign in more homes than here in America. If our forefathers, on the bleak Massachusetts coast, wresting crops by primitive means from an unfertile soil, exposed to disease and peril, with hostile savages as their only neighbors, with relatives and friends distant a journey of months across the wide ocean; if the Pilgrims who instituted Thanksgiving day could find anything for which to be thankful—and they found reasons in abundance for gratitude to God—how much, how infinitely much more, have the men, women and children of today, with comforts, luxuries and conveniences of which our ancestors never dreamed, to show appreciation of! Let us celebrate by rejoicing and being glad, forgetting for the time evil and annoyance; but amid our feasting and merriment let us not forget the origin of Thanksgiving day and the impressive lesson thereof and fail not to give thanks that our lot has been cast amid a glorious civilization and the peace, prosperity and progressiveness of the twentieth century, which is likely to be memorable as the greatest period of human advancement yet known in all history.

The greater Pittsburg idea is again finding favor in the Smoky city. If Pittsburg would extend her limits as Chicago has done, she would occupy a position on the census list commensurate with her importance as a commercial center. With present circumscribed limits this is an impossibility.

A New York woman is reported to have lived in luxury for 20 years on the proceeds of begging letters. Fortunate, those who value ease more than self-respect are comparatively few.

East Liverpool tolerates all sorts of rubbish on the streets with remarkable patience. But when it comes to blocking a main thoroughfare for weeks with a whole house it is no wonder they kick.

President Castro, of Venezuela, more enlightened than the average South American, has a good word for the United States and wants to help us enforce the Monroe doctrine when the time comes.

At this season the eagle is not in it. The turkey is the American bird. He is an American product, and we all admire him.

Herr Krupp left anywhere from $75,000,000 to 150,000,000, not a bad fortune for a gunsmith to accumulate.

Yes, East Liverpool needs a new city hall. But the need of paying some of the city's debt is more pressing.

WELLSVILLE

ONLY SIX PRESENT

And the Wellsville Council Meeting Was a Very Short One.

A five-minute meeting of council was held last evening at the city hall, at which time an ordinance levying assessments upon property benefited by the paving of Liverpool street and authorizing the issue of bonds in anticipation of the collection was passed upon its second reading. The ordinance will be passed finally at the regular meeting of council next Monday evening, while it is hoped that at least eight councilmen will be present. Only six were present last evening and for that reason no important business could be transacted.

It has been stated by a certain city official that were all of the councilmen to receive a compensation for attending the meetings, there would have been many more of them present than there were last evening. It is a hard matter to get council together, excepting on the regular meeting night, and it seems to make no difference if business of the most vital importance is to be transacted.

ANTI-SALOON CONVENTION

Three Wellsville Pastors And Dr. Tracy Will Attend the Columbus Meeting.

Rev. and Mrs. Lemoine C. Wells and Dr. N. W. Tracy, the Kentucky evangelist, who has been holding a series of lectures in this city during the past two weeks, left this morning for West Lafayette, O., where they will visit at Rev. Mr. Wells' home. Rev. Mr. Wells will address the students of the West Lafayette university, of which his father, Rev. W. L. Wells, is president. Rev. Mr. Wells' subject will be "Possession Is Dispossession." From there Rev. Mr. Wells and Dr. Tracy will go to Columbus, where they will attend the convention of the Ohio Anti-Saloon league, which is to be held December 1, 2 and 3.

Rev. C. E. Clark, of the First M. E. church, and Rev. W. M. Glasgow, pastor of the United Presbyterian church of this city, will leave Monday for Columbus, where they will also attend the convention.

News and Notes About The Potteries

HUMOROUS POTTERY.

Pottery does not lend itself to humorous treatment. People, however, who have even the least sense of humor, says an exchange, must admit that they cannot look at some of the recent samples of humorous pottery without smiling. The quaint-looking faces and snug smiles on some of the imported Dutch cats, chiefly in majolica or a kind of Rouen ware, are enough to make even the most sedate person smile. The more recent English examples of cats in the act of singing, after the style of some lady amateurs, although in majolica and variously, are quaint enough to cause ripples, if not roars, of laughter. One cat stands on its front, and sits on its hind legs and tail, while it looks at one serio-comically, with its head half-screwed around. There are cats posing in all manner of grotesque positions. These, when tied up with yellow ribbon, are enough to make a funeral mute's face broaden into a smile. How sedate, also appears a rabbit dressed up as a parson! How comically thoughtful is an earthenware monkey modeled as though in the act of solving some Darwinian problem or intricate sum! China monkeys in grotesque attitudes, dogs twisting and turning themselves almost inside out, dogs imitating human eccentricities, and other animals posing in strange and unfamiliar attitudes, until one wonders whether our modelers or their models are troubled with "a little bit off the top."

NARROW ESCAPE.

Misses Margaret Russell and Celia Gray, fillers-in in the decorating department at Cartwright's, had a narrow escape yesterday at noon from a horrible death or serious injury. They were compelled to cross the railroad track to get to the pottery, but were confronted by a freight train that blocked the crossing. Not caring to wait for it to move along they determined to cross the track beneath the cars. No sooner had they started than the train began to move. Terribly frightened they made all possible haste and succeeded in reaching the other side before the wheels reached them. After this they will wait until the trains have passed before attempting to cross the tracks.

WELL EXPECTED IN.

The oil well on the property of Peter McDevitt, the popular dipper at the Thompson, has been sunk to a depth of several hundred feet and it is expected to reach the producing sand either today or tomorrow. Mr. McDevitt and his many friends at the plant are anxiously awaiting the outcome. The property is surrounded with wells that are producing oil in paying quantities.

PIECE WORK NOW.

A change in the method of pay went into effect in the decorating department at Cartwright's Monday. Only transferring crews are effected. Heretofore they have been paid by the day, but under the new plan it will be all piece work. The prevailing scale of prices has been adopted and the new plan is proving much more satisfactory to the girls and the printers.

POPULAR WITH EMPLOYERS.

Miss Mary Maple, who was one of the brides today in the double wedding at Chester, has been assistant bookkeeper in the office at the Cartwright for several years, and has endeared herself to her employers by her sweet disposition and efficient service. They will part with her with the deepest regret.

FEUSTEL-BEAVER.

Frank Feustel, a presser, and Miss Ada Beaver, of the warehouse at Thompsons, are to be married Thanksgiving day. They will leave for Pittsburg on the morning of that day where the ceremony will be performed. They have the best wishes of their many friends at the plant.

NOTES OF THE POTTERS.

James Combs, of the glost end at the Thompson, is reported among the sick today.

Miss Ola Poland, of Cartwright's, is attending the double wedding at Chester today.

George Bloor has accepted a position at the Thompson and is finishing cups for John McDole.

Leonard Beatty, who has been operating the plate and saucer jigger at the Thompson, is now on the spittoon jigger.

Glade Coleman, of the packing department at the Thompson, returned to work again yesterday after a week's layoff occasioned by an injured hand.

Miss Susan Wilson, and her mother-in-law, Mrs. Jennie Wilson, will leave in a few days for Reedsville, where they will make their future home. The former has resigned her position at the Thompson.

TILT OF COUNCILMEN ENLIVENS PROCEEDINGS AT CITY FATHERS' MEETING

had advocated illegal transactions.

"You, or the council let a contract to George Adam for street signs not long ago. The bids were opened, and a glaring irregularity was pointed out. This you called a technicality, and in spite of the efforts of Mr. Johnston and myself, no other explanation could be obtained. And there are other cases.'

Still excited, Mr. Peach called upon the body to vindicate him, but Uncle Joe held to his point, and scored the Third ward member in plain and unmistakable language.

When the solicitor was called upon he gave as his opinion that inasmuch as no action for damages had been begun against the city, it would not be legal to voluntarily pay for the improvement, and it was dropped for the present.

Members Barlow, Bullock, Peach, Orr, Horwell, Nice and McConnell were present when the meeting was called to order, Thomas and Marshall arriving later. The builders' ordinance was the first matter up, and though everyone favored its passage, several members, with the mayor, thought it was not complete. The latter held there ought to be a clause placing a time limit in which the building under way should be completed. The ordinance was allowed to go on its second reading, and between now and the time it is up for final passage the clauses which are now lacking will be inserted.

The ordinance providing for money to pay for the improvement of Springdale street, was put on its second reading, and under suspension of the rules was finally passed.

Ravine street residents petitioned for a light on that thoroughfare and it was referred to the light committee.

Under the head of reports of committees it had been predicted that the railroad committee would enlighten the council and the public generally upon the plan mapped out by it in dealing with the Pennsylvania company, but strange to say, no report was forthcoming. It is known, however, that the committee had its work well in hand, and at the proper time the curious ones will be "put next."

President Nice desired a few reports from the committees appointed some time ago to look after the several departments of the city government. It developed that none of the committees had as yet got down to work. Mr. Nice urged that meetings be called at once and the task begun, as there were but a few weeks in which to complete it. The president recalled that two committees had been omitted, that of the sinking fund and the one to fix the salaries of the municipal offices. He did not fill these places, however, probably thinking it could be done at the next meeting.

The street committee had neglected to have constructed a pair of steps connecting Trentvale street and Edgewood addition. The work had been authorized several months ago, the lumber was on the ground, but no steps had been taken toward finishing up the work. Chairman Bullock, of the street committee, reported that his department had been given the impression that the work had been completed a long time ago.

An ordinance providing for the construction of a storm water sewer for 407 feet on Bradshaw avenue was brought up and read, but it was found that the work could not be started this fall, and the fact that the present council cannot make contracts to be carried out by bodies to be organized later, the measure killed itself.

The assessing ordinance for Trentvale street covering the collection of assessments upon that thoroughfare according to benefits, was placed on its final reading under suspension of the rules, and passed. Dr. Marshall supported the motion for a suspension of the rules, but voted against the adoption of the ordinance. Of the assessing ordinances on the three streets, Calcutta road, Trentvale street and Pennsylvania avenue, the two former have been passed. As soon as the equalizing board, now at work on Pennsylvania avenue, has finished its labors, it too, can be passed. The council will then be ready to adopt a bond issue proposition for the purpose of paying the city's share of the expense of improving these thoroughfares and will doubtless do so.

It was reported that Mrs. Ellen O'Connor, with a few other residents of Oblique street, were not satisfied with the grade which had been established there and wanted it changed. The engineer stated there had been an addition laid out since the street grade had been established, and that the owners of this plot had filled in the lots to a depth that did not correspond with the fixed grade. He did not see how the lines could be changed unless all the property owners on the street would petition council in the customary way.

A petition will be presented this week asking that an additional portion of Summit Lane be improved by paving. The city has now under way a section of the alley and provided the property owners waive all rights that alley, between Jackson and Jefferson, will be paved along with the rest.

On motion of McConnell the street commissioner was ordered to repair a flight of steps on Eighth street, near the Corns property.

Several pavements on the south side of Fifth street had been omitted from the list when the matter was taken up some time ago, and by motion the engineer was instructed to go ahead with the work of laying them at once.

It was the opinion of Engineer J. C. Kelly that the repairs could be made to Thomas Chadwick's property at a cost of $192.50, but no action was taken. Many of the members believe that it will cost the city much more than that amount if Mr. Chadwick decided to sue for damages. This mave is thought to be unevitable.

CURING CONSUMPTION.

When Scott's Emulsion makes the consumptive gain flesh it is curing his consumption.

Exactly what goes on inside to make the consumptive gain weight when taking Scott's Emulsion is still a mystery.

Scott's Emulsion does something to the lungs too that reduces the cough. More weight and less cough always mean that consumption is losing its influence over the system.

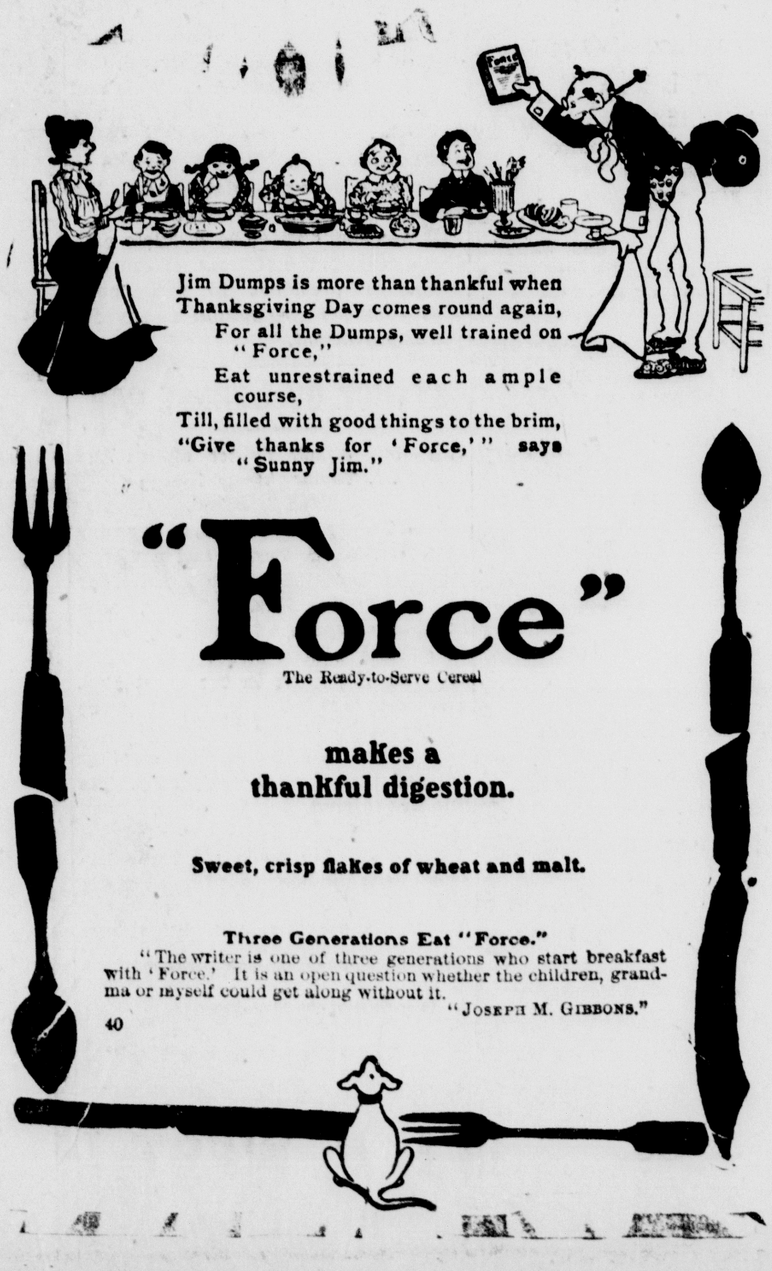

Scott's Emulsion is a reliable help.

The Big Game of Thanksgiving Day Will Be Played at West End Park.

The West End Rovers, one of the fastest rugby foot ball teams in northeastern Ohio, will play the Rochester second team tomorrow afternoon in West End park. Not until last evening did Manager Ashbaugh know that the game would be played in the West End. He had been given to understand that the grounds were taken, but John Walsh, manager of the park, notified him that the first team will have no game.

The West End Rovers average in weight about 135 pounds, and for their size they put up a game well worth witnessing. It is the wish of the team to get games with all local teams who come in their class and have announced that they will play for $50 or $100 a side. They state that they are overwilling to meet the Oakland boys, but will not play for pleasure. Considering that there will be practically no other form of amusement afforded in the city tomorrow, it is expected that a large crowd will see Rochester and the Rovers take a tumble. The former team is not only a strong bunch, but it has an enviable record for the season, and the Rovers do not expect to win the game without putting forth every effort. Competent referees have been secured and the contest will be fought with vigor by both sides. The Rovers will lineup as follows:

Foot Ball Until January 1.

The season for association foot ball will be extended until at least the first of the year. The Rovers are preparing for quite a swing around the circuit where this sport thrives, and already have a prospect of four games, to be played during the week interveining between Christmas and New Year's. The exact dates have not been fixed, but the first game is to be played on Christmas day, probably with the McDonald team. They will visit Laurel Hill, Swissvale and Youngstown. The Rovers are confident of at least getting an even split on these games and hope to win a majority.

Music in Plenty.

There will be plenty of music for the Thanksgiving foot ball game in Salem when Salem will play Lisbon for the championship of the county. The services of the Quaker City band has already been secured. In addition to this the band of 20 pieces, which will be there on that day with the "Robinson Crusoe" show, will be on the field rooting for Salem. Lisbon will also have a band.

To Play With Yale.

The officials of the Yale baseball team have just completed their schedule for 1903, and in the list of games appears the name of the University of West Virginia. This game will be played at New Haven, May 13.

Newspaper Consolidation.

G. Ernest Koch, who has published the Columbiana Independent for some time, in the last issue of that paper states that it has been sold to Newell & Shingler, publishers of the Columbiana Leader. The purchaser will consolidate the two papers. Koch will remain in Columbiana and will conduct a job printing business exclusively.

Pale, Weak and Constantly Tired.

Dr. Miles' Heart Cure Cured Me.

"I write to thank you for the cure I received from your remedies. When I began taking your medicine I was confined to my bed most of the time. Our best home doctors told me there was no cure for me on account of the weak condition of my heart. I was pale and weak, constantly tired, had no appetite and could not sleep. I was exceedingly nervous and easily irritated in consequence. At last I began taking as a last resort, Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure together with Dr. Miles' Wine of Sarsaparilla. I was helped from the start and I cannot say enough in praise of these wonderful remedies. I can truthfully say they are the best medicines I ever took. They cured me and I am now able to work on the farm every day. I gladly recommend your remedies to all sufferers."—Wm. B. Campbell, Mantorville, Minn.

"For years I could not turn my head to the right but it caused great pain in the back of my neck and it seemed at times my head would burst with pain. I would sometimes lie down, and could not get up without help my neck was so stiff. About once a week I would have to go to bed with a very severe headache. By using one of Dr. Miles' Nerve Plasters on my neck and occasionally using the Anti-Pain Pills, which always relieved the headache instantly, I completely overcame my trouble, and both headache and stiffness have disappeared."—Miss Lucy Billows, Cleveland, Ohio.

THE INDIANS' THANKSGIVING

THE interest in Thanksgiving day and its observance is just as intense these days among the reservation Indians as in college towns where great football games are scheduled to occur, says the New York Times. Especially is this true in the southwest, where the Indians have had an opportunity to become thoroughly civilized of late years. The white people find no more enjoyment in this day of universal good cheer than do these same dusky redskins.

It is a day of feasting, playing and gambling, with a big dance at night. Such sport only comes once a year to them nowadays, when they have had to forsake the scalping knife for the plow. Their wild nature rebelled at the idea of work, and it has been with much difficulty that the government agents have made farmers out of the young braves. A day of rest and amusement is considered good for their better nature, and the government authorities are willing that Thanksgiving day shall become a festal time for the reservation wards of the nation.

The Kiowas and Comanches, who have but recently been placed on allotments, will have forsaken many of their wild plans of amusement this Thanksgiving, owing to the fact that they have been cut off the free list of beef issues. They have arranged to draw grass money on Thanksgiving, and a goodly portion of this will be spent in purchasing food for a grand feast. At night they will take part in a green corn dance, at which prayers will be offered to the Great Spirit for the good crops which they have had the past season. The spirit of thankfulness pervades the Indian celebrations.

The Osages hold a big feast at Pawhuska, their capital city. All members of the tribe are invited to take part in the festivities. At the beginning and end of each meal—and there are many—the aged missionary who lives among them is invited to deliver a short prayer thanking the Great Spirit for the good things which the agent has sent to them. The food is cooked by the squaws, and, while it could be prepared in a much cleaner and more tasteful manner, the cooking is an improvement over that of a few years gone.

The Apaches and Cheyennes are in the habit of holding a pony smoke. Often the Osages indulge in this expensive festival. A pony smoke is a friendly meeting of two tribes and is especially appropriate for the occasion. The tribe giving the smoke is supposed to bear all of the expenses. They provide the best game and vegetables in the market for their guests, and at the end of the first day's meeting they present a good pony to the head of each family visiting them. As a tribe consists of from 300 to 500 families, the expenses soon mount high. The Osages, being the richest reservation Indians there are today, can better afford to hold pony smokes, and, combined with their feast day, they generally invite several hundred guests from the Poncas, Tonkawas and surrounding tribes. Those accepting the ponies are supposed to return the gift with equally expensive ones later on, but few of them can do so.

The Poncas hold every Thanksgiving as a beef issue day. If the agent does not come forward and present them with a herd of cattle for this occasion, they mortgage their property and buy cattle of some neighboring ranchmen. A beef issue is the most typical of the redskin and also the most picturesque of Indian Thanksgiving celebrations. For years the government has forbidden the issue of beef after the manner of an old time issue, but on special occasions they are allowed the amusement of killing their own meat. It is said by the government officers who succeeded in having the practice stopped that beef issue tends to make the Indian wilder and more difficult to civilize.

A hundred cattle are turned loose in a large pasture. The young men of the tribe are mounted on mustangs and have shining field guns. With the good wishes of the squaws and medicine men ringing in their ears they ride out to kill the cattle. The beasts have no chance for life whatever. The chase is accompanied by an undue amount of wild yelling, while excitement grows intense in the camp. The smell of fresh blood makes the squaws wild, as it were. After all of the cattle have been shot down then the killers give a signal which means that all of the tribe are at liberty to rush forth and secure their portion. A half beef is awarded to each squaw. The beef is cleaned and cooked on a fire on the open plain, while the medicine men dance their approval and the warriors sing in their glee. The feast follows, with more dancing, and the whole day is thus spent, ending late at night with a final gorge.

THANKSGIVING PROCLAMATIONS

Carefully preserved in the state department at Washington are all of the proclamations ever issued by the presidents of the United States. They are kept in large brown envelopes and carefully filed away in series for each year. Among them are the Thanksgiving proclamations issued by our presidents and include one dated Jan. 1, 1795, and signed by George Washington, while another bears the signature of James Madison.

The issuing of a Thanksgiving proclamation by the president of the United States is a more complicated affair than most people imagine. It is a serious duty for the president, for it is customary for him to write this proclamation with his own hand and to put into it as much of the spirit of the day as possible. President Harrison used to take a pencil and a little pad of paper and write out the proclamation in full. Then he would turn it over to one of the executive clerks to be copied. Mr. Harrison preferred to use his pencil rather than to dictate. President Cleveland also wrote some things with his own hand, but he used a stenographer, too, a great deal.

The president in writing a Thanksgiving proclamation makes a draft of what he wishes to say. Such a high official as he is cannot afford the time to make pretty copies of his letters. He simply scrawls what he thinks ought to be said, with corrections and amendments here and there, and after the wording has satisfied him he hands it over to a clerk to be copied in proper shape. In the state department there are two or three clerks who make a specialty of penmanship, and one of these engrosses the proclamation on parchment artistically, when it is sent back to the White House to receive the president's signature. Then the great seal of the state department is affixed. It is a very ornate seal. It ought to be, for it cost $1,000. It is kept in a rosewood case.

The affixing of this seal is a momentous affair. A warrant for it must have been previously obtained from and signed by the president. The proclamation having been made entirely formal and authentic by the addition of the seal, copies are taken of it by clerks, and one is sent to each of the states and territories, addressed to the governors.

The state department uses the typewriter for some purposes, but not for official correspondence. All of the copies of the proclamation are written out on the long sheets of blue paper which are used for official correspondence. Each governor who receives a copy of the president's proclamation will make a proclamation of his own. But in the meantime the proclamation of the president has been made public, and the people all over the country know what day has been chosen for Thanksgiving.

SPOILED HIS DINNER.

An Unpleasant Thanksgiving Day For a Politician.

"Bluest Thanksgiving I ever spent?" mused the fine old gentleman who has an unconquerable antipathy to practical politics. "It stands out in my memory like an obelisk on a plain, and it was not so very long ago, either.

"I had been induced that fall to run for an important public office. It was done against my better judgment and under great pressure, but when a man enters such a fight he wants to win. I was in a close district and determined to put up the very best fight that the circumstances would permit. I advertised at once for an extra stenographer, and from the many who responded selected a beautiful, bright and dashing young woman who justified my immediate faith in her ability. She did all my private correspondence, knew as much about the inside of the campaign as I did, worked day and night with a willingness that was surprising, and even took from one of my shrewdest advisers the list of voters in the strongest section with which I had to contend, with full instructions as to how the most influential persons among them could be won to my cause. It was great work, and yet I fell several hundred short of the normal party vote.

"My successful opponent lived in a neighboring town and graciously invited me to be his guest on the following Thanksgiving. It would have looked surly to refuse, and I went. It was really an admirable social function, but the few hours I put in there were torture. The host met me with a hearty handclasp. Turning, he said, 'My wife.' Resplendent in satin and jewels, I saw my stenographer. 'Love and war,' she murmured. 'He thinks I was visiting my old home in New England.' I held my peace, but that fatted turkey tasted like cork."—Detroit Free Press.

THE FIRST THANKSGIVING.

A Cotemporary Account of the Pioneer Feast In 1621.

The first Thanksgiving day was celebrated in the autumn of 1621.

An account of the pioneer of all these feasts has been presented in a letter by Edward Winslow written in the same year:

"You shall understand that in this little time that few of us have been here we have built seven dwelling houses and four for the use of the plantation and have made preparations for eleven others. We set the last spring some twenty acres of corn and sowed some six acres of barley and peas. Our corn did prove well, God be praised, and our barley indifferent good, but our peas not worth harvesting. Our harvest being got in, our governor sent four men out fowling, so that we might after a special manner rejoice together after we had gathered the fruit of our labors. They four in one day killed as much fowl as, with a little help beside, served the whole company almost a week, at which time among other recreations we exercised our arms, many of the Indians arriving among us, and among the rest their greatest king, Massasoit, with ninety men, whom for three days we entertained and feasted. And, although it be not always so plentiful as it was at this time with us, yet, by the goodness of God, we are so far from want that we often wish you partakers of our plenty."

Thus Thanksgiving was born.

It continued to be celebrated, though not with any regularity, for about sixty years, after which it was annually ordered by the general court, not always in November, but generally after the harvests were gathered.

An Ideal Woman's Medicine.

So says Mrs. Josie Irwin, of 325 So. College St., Nashville, Tenn., of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Never in the history of medicine has the demand for one particular remedy for female diseases equalled that attained by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and never during the lifetime of this wonderful medicine has the demand for it been so great as it is to-day.

From the Atlantic to the Pacific, and throughout the length and breadth of this great continent come the glad tidings of woman's sufferings relieved by it, and thousands upon thousands of letters are pouring in from grateful women saying that it will and positively does cure the worst forms of female complaints.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all women who are puzzled about their health to write her at Lynn, Mass., for advice. Such correspondence is seen by women only, and no charge is made.

THE GORE TRAGEDY.

American Doctors Tend Individually to Accident Theory.

Paris, Nov. 26.—In spite of the rigid secrecy which has been maintained by the officials and by the commission of American doctors concerning the result of the autopsy conducted by the latter on the body of Mrs. Ellen Gore, it is learned from an authoritative source that the doctors tend individually to the acceptance of the theory of an accident, and the probabilities are that their official report will strongly incline to that theory, if it does not positively assert it, thus bringing the French and American doctors into agreement and relieving the case of any international significance.

Consul General Gowdy continues to take the depositions of all witnesses. The Temps last night said that it was the activity displayed by the Russian colony on behalf of De Rydewski which stimulated the American officials into a counter activity on behalf of the late Mrs. Gore.

Farm Boiler Exploded.

Lebanon, Pa., Nov. 26.—A steam boiler on one of the dairy farms of G. Dawson Coleman, near here, exploded yesterday. The barn was set on fire and destroyed. Abraham Becker and Adam Ryle were badly burned. The live stock was saved.

JUST IN TIME

Down in Health and Strength—Nervous—Irritable—Ache All Over—A Depressed Condition Rapidly Changed.

Mr. B. L. Updegraff, of No. 169 Fifth street, East Liverpool, Ohio, says:—"As a general and nerve tonic I can recommend Dr. Chase's Nerve Pills I got at Larkins' Drug Store. I was at the time feeling run down and nervous—not up to the mark in health and needed a tonic. The medicine did its work nicely and I regained tone, strength and energy again."

THE NEW YORK STOCK MARKET.

Trading Moderately Light and Chiefly Professional—Bonds Heavy in Sympathy With Stocks.

New York, Nov. 26.—Trading, while not especially light, was chiefly professional. Many traders showed a disposition to keep out of the market pending the publication of President Roosevelt's annual message, in which important recommendations regarding trust and tariff legislation are looked for.

Foreign exchange advanced to the highest point yet reached in the present upward movement. Demand bills sold up to 487.40. The price soon declined 10 points, however, at which level most of the day's business was done.

Declines were general at the opening, New York Central, St. Paul, Union Pacific, Reading, Sugar and other active issues selling off more or less extensively. Heavy purchases of Reading around 61 attracted attention, but that stock was among the principal sufferers in the selling movement at the close. There were unimportant recoveries and the tone of the market at the close was steady. London traded in about 12,000 shares, half purchases and half sales.

Bonds showed heaviness in sympathy with stocks and Wabash debenture Bs developed exceptional weakness. Total sales, par value, $1,955,000.

United States 3s, coupon, advanced ⅛ per cent on the last call.

STEAMER QUITO ASHORE.

No Lives Lost, but the Boat Is a Total Wreck.

Lorain, O., Nov. 26.—The steamer Quito, ore laden, from Escanaba to Cleveland, ran ashore while trying to make this port at 7 o'clock last night. A northeast gale prevailed at the time. The captain and 12 of the crew and the steward were rescued. Two engineers and two mates were left in the engine room. A boat sent to their rescue afterwards was able to get off but one of the mates, the other three remaining aboard, waiting for assistance which was sent from the Cleveland life saving station. The boat sprung a leak yesterday during the heavy wind, hence the endeavor to reach this port instead of going on to Cleveland.

At midnight the remaining three members of the boat's crew were taken off by the Cleveland life saving crew. The boat is pounding on the beach.

Mull's Grape Tonic Cures Constipation.

When the bowels move irregularly the entire bodily system must suffer. Constipation more frequently occurs among women and it manifests itself in provoking profuse leucorrhea and other serious female diseases. Regular bowels will result in a complete cure when you use Mull's Grape Tonic. Unlike pills and ordinary cathartics, this remedy is a mild, gentle laxative in addition to being a greater flesh-builder, blood-maker and strength-giver than cod liver oil or any other preparation recommended for that purpose. Mull's Grape Tonic will permanently cure the most obstinate case of constipation, and the numerous afflictions that invariably follow in its wake. No matter if it is piles, liver complaint, kidney disorder, vertigo, palpitation of the heart, diarrhea or the self-poisoning which follows when the undigested food remains in the bowels where it putrefies and empties highly diseased germs into the blood, such as typhoid and malaria, Mull's Grape Tonic will positively cure. Large sample bottle will be sent free to any address on receipt of 10 cents to cover postage, by the Lightning Medicine Co., Rock Island, Ill. Send name of your druggist. RETURNS AS ONE FROM THE DEAD

John Meade Was Thought to Be Resting in a Grave at Wheeling.

MANGLED BODY WAS FOUND

And Identified As His—Now He Turns Up In Jail In Newport, Ky., And Relatives Will Have Him Released Promptly.

Concerning John Meade, whose case was exclusively reported in the News Review on Monday, a Cincinnati dispatch says:

John Meade, who was arrested two weeks ago under the name of John Montgomery by the Newport police, has been mourned as dead for four years by his relatives, who reside in Wheeling, W. Va. That truth is stranger than fiction is again exemplified in the story of the "resurrection" of Meade, a scion of a prominent West Virginia family. His father, Colonel C. A. Meade, who died about a year ago, was mine inspector under Governor Atkinson and a well known politician.

His son John ran away from home five years ago, owing to some difficulty he had with his parents. Nothing more was heard from him until a year later, when a man answering his description was killed in a railroad wreck outside of Wheeling. The body was cut to pieces, but as the remains bore certain striking resemblances to John Meade, and the family was notified. Meade, Sr., identified the remains as those of his son and they were buried in the family vault.

About two weeks ago two young men were arrested by the Newport police. One of them, who gave the name of Shannon, was caught in the act of touching Motorman Kruse, of the C. N. & C. Street railway. The other man gave the name of John Montgomery. Both were tried for disorderly conduct and fined $25 and costs and sentenced to 10 days in jail. Having no money, they were remanded to the Newport jail to serve out the fine and sentence.

Montgomery, after languishing a few days, asked of Jailer Ploeger some paper, stating that he desired to write a letter to his relatives in Wheeling. He was given the paper and other writing materials and he indicted a letter to his brother asking him to send him $10.

Early yesterday morning Sergeant Gastreich, of the Newport police, was summoned to answer a telephone call from Wheeling, W. Va. The gentleman at the other end of the wire asked the sergeant if there was any one in the jail by the name of Meade or Montgomery.

He was told of the Montgomery case, and the young man was taken out of the cell and brought to the 'phone. The two began a conversation, and it was but a few minutes until the man at the other end recognized his brother, who was supposed to have been dead for four years.

The brother made arrangements to come to Newport, and will arrive today to pay the unexpired fine and take his brother home, where he will be received with open arms by a loving mother and five sisters.

Cleveland Accepts Invitation.

Philadelphia, Nov. 26.—Former President Grover Cleveland has accepted an invitation to preside at a public meeting to be held here on Dec. 11 in the interests of the Berean manual training and industrial school for colored people. Mr. Cleveland will make an address. Among the other speakers will be former Postmaster General Charles Emory Smith, Colonel A. K. McClure and Booker T. Washington.

Philadelphian Society.

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 26.—The Philadelphian society will hold commemorative exercises here on Dec. 6, to celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary of the formation of the American and Canadian Student Young Men's Christian association movement, which originated in Princeton in 1877. Representatives from nearly all of the student associations in the United States and Canada will be present.

Non-Union Barber Shot.

Wellston, O., Nov. 26.—Adam McClung, an old resident barber of Wellston, lies at the hospital at the point of death as the result of three bullet wounds inflicted by David Wills, secretary of the Jackson County Barbers' union. The trouble arose in Ruebler's barber shop. McClung is not a member of the union and had been employed there during the week.

It leads—the News Review.

There is praise among the people, there is song in burg and town,
For another year of plenty, pride and honor and renown;
And it's time the eery eagle
That we happened to inveigle
For a banner bird should fold his wings and pray.
But he can't. I'll tell you why—
In an hour he has to die,
For the eagle is a turkey today.

There are days of bitter battle, days of pride in deed and man,
When we love to hear the eagle scream as loudly as he can;
When the eagle of the mountain
And his mold on tomb and fountain
Have a chance to flap their wings and have their say.
But the emblem and the power
Are abolished for an hour,
For the eagle is a turkey today.

Where he wore a feather collar he has donned a fringe of dye,
And a pink and purple wattle droops across his eagle eye;
And his heaven reaching pinions
Trail the ground among the minions
Of the barnyard and the coop and country way,
While he bids his friends goodby
Ere he lays him down to die,
For the eagle is a turkey today.

Oh, I would not dim or tarnish aught of glory I have heard
Of our good old Uncle Sammy or the glory of his bird;
But when block and ax inveigle
To decapitate the eagle
Then I wonder why we let them have their way,
Till I learn the reason why—
Once a year the bird must die,
For the eagle is a turkey that day.

NEW CITY HALL NOW TALKED OF

PLACE TO PRESERVE CITY RECORDS BADLY NEEDED.

A Matter That Will Doubtless Be Brought to New Safety Board's Attention.

The board of public safety, after completing the work absolutely necessary for the running of the city's affairs, will no doubt be swamped with requests and suggestions by people who have fed on hope for years and who will feel that the time has arrived for action or consideration in their case.

For several months after entering upon their duties the board will experience a time not to be envied. Protests which have been hanging fire for years will be in evidence, and all that the board will be able to do will be to promise action at an early date. Among the numerous requests that will be made of the honorable body, one in particular is being talked of at the present time.

Every resident of the city who has ever had occasion to transact business of any kind at the city hall knows without being told that East Liverpool is and has been for years badly in need of a more complete building. It is said that there is not a city of its size in the state that is not provided with a larger city building, better equipped and in every way more satisfactory. And it is an undisputed fact that there are many cities in the state less than half as large that have city halls which would be a credit to this municipality.

Although it is assured that the board will sooner or later be called upon to have the desired building erected, it is probable that it will be approached gently, in consideration of the fact that the board may look upon the question as one too stupenduous for immediate action. The first step toward its erection, if the board honors the request, will be to have built adjacent to the present hall, a vault that can be utilized by all of the city officials in storing for protection the valuables in their possession.

Were a fire to rage in the building at the present time the city would undoubtedly lose several thousand dollars worth of documents. In the city engineer's office there are plans and specifications of value impossible to estimate; in the city clerk's office records invaluable lie and in the mayor's office dockets covering crimes for years back. In the three offices the paraphernalia is simply under lock and key, which practically means that nothing is protected. Mayor Davidson said yesterday that something must be done and speedily if it be the desire of the board to have the city's property under protection.

MISS FAY LEE,

President of the Shakespearian Club, Kansas City.

Miss Fay Lee.

"Your booklet came to my home like a message of health when I had suffered with headache, backache and bearing-down pains. I was weak, nervous and hysterical and had not consulted any doctor, thinking it would pass away in time, but instead I found that the pains increased and were more frequent. I decided to try Wine of Cardui and in a short time was much improved. It seemed to act like a charm. I kept up the treatment and the result was most satisfactory. Words fail to express my gratitude for the suffering that is now saved me. I am in fine health, physically and mentally. I can only say 'thank you', but there is much more in my heart for you."

BEARING-DOWN pains are the worst that women know. If you are suffering from this trouble you need not be uncertain about it. The pains in the abdomen and back that feel as if heavy weights were pulling down on the nerves of the stomach are "bearing-down pains". They may not be particularly severe at present but they are growing worse. That headache which nearly drives you distracted now is caused by the terrible nervous tension. The nerves soon begin to give way under the strain. You perhaps jump at any unusual disturbance, or laugh or weep, hysterically, at no apparent cause. That is what Miss Fay Lee, 603½ North Seventh Street, Kansas City, Kansas, was coming to when she rescued herself by taking Wine of Cardui. The Wine made her a strong, healthy woman again, as it has made a million other women strong and healthy. By inducing regular menstruation the entire system is relieved of the terrible wasting drains. The ligaments which hold the womb in place are strengthened by a healthy flow and that organ is returned to its normal position. Returning health is the result. This is what Wine of Cardui has done for thousands of the best women in America.

If you need advice write The Ladies' Advisory Department, The Chattanooga Medicine Company, Chattanooga, Tenn., describing all your symptoms freely, and a letter of advice will be sent you. Secure a $1.00 bottle of Wine of Cardui from your druggist to-day.

A THANKFUL THANKSGIVING

"I DON'T feel as if I should enjoy this Thanksgivin'," said Mrs. Joel Nisbett, looking down into the basket of glossy, red cheeked Spitzenbergs as if it were a family vault and taking up an apple as if it had been a skull; "no, I don't."

"Then, Sarepta," observed her husband, who had just thrown a huge log on the open fire, "you don't disarn nothin' to be thankful for! It's as harnsome a turkey as ever flapped, and I don't know of a year when I've had nicer pumpkins on that ar' corn lot!"

"'Tain't turkey or pumpkin pies or cranberry sass as makes Thanksgivin'," signed Mrs. Nisbett.

"What is it, then? Ef it's cold weather, I should ha' thought the last frost would ha' done the business for you pretty fairly. Them artemisias by the front door is scorched black, and the old maple is losin' its leaves as if they

"I AM GOING TO BE MARRIED."

was rainin' down. Parson Jarvis is comin' all the way from Sloatesville to preach tomorrow, and the quire's larned a bran' new anthem just a-purpose, about bein' thankful for harvest and all that sort of thing. I'm sure I don't know what else you'd have."

Mrs. Nisbett only answered by a sigh.

"I wonder if 'tain't possible Stephe 'll be hum tonight," she said after a pause.

"He writ not. He thought he'd drop in arly tomorrow mornin' if he caught the train he expected. Only think, old woman; it's five years since Stephe was hum to Thanksgivin'!"

Old Nisbett rubbed his horny hands, with a chuckle, adding:

"And I s'pose, if all accounts is true, he's gettin' to be a great man out in that western country. It was kind of a hard pull when he went off and left us, but maybe the boy was in the right."

"Yes," said Mrs. Nisbett dolorously, "but somehow I can't get reconciled to the idea of his marryin' a strange gal out there."

Joel scratched his head. This was a phase of the subject that he scarcely felt competent to discuss.

"Maybe you'll like her. Stephen says she's a nice gal."

"Stephen says! As if a man over head and ears in love wouldn't say anything."

"I wish he'd told us who she was."

Mrs. Nisbett groaned again. Joel went out to the woodpile, the everyday shrine whence he generally derived what little of philosophic inspiration he had.

"Mrs. Nisbett!"

It was a soft little voice, and the old lady's face relaxed instinctively as it sounded on her ears.

"Why, Lida Tremaine—'tain't you!"

"It is. I've done everything that Aunt Constance wanted, and now I've just run over to see if you don't need a bit of help."

She stood in the doorway, a fair little apparition, all flushed and rosy with the November wind, while her blue eyes sparkled as if they were twin sapphires hidden away under her long, dark lashes. She was neither blond nor brunette, but a fresh cheeked girl, with nut brown hair, skin like the leaf of a damask rose, a straight, refined nose and lips as ripe as a red crabapple, though by no means so sour. Generally she had a demure sort of gravity lingering about her face, but when she did laugh a dimple came out upon her cheek and a row of pearly teeth glimmered instantaneously.

In one hand she carried a bunch of late autumn flowers.

"See!" she cried, holding them up. "I ransacked Aunt Constance's garden for these. I knew that big vase on the mantel needed something, and, with a branch or so of scarlet leaves, I'll have a royal bouquet to help you keep Thanksgiving."

Mrs. Nisbett took the fair oval face between her two hands and kissed the fresh little mouth.

"Set down, Lida," she said. "I wasn't a-calculatin' to have no sech fixin's up, but you've sech a way, child, I can't never say no to you."

"But you're going to keep Thanksgiving," cried Lida, throwing off her outer wrappings and dancing up to the looking glass like a little gale of wind, "because you invited Aunt Constance and me to dinner and because your son is coming home."

"Yes, child, yes," said Mrs. Nisbett, subsiding once more into the mournful key from which Lida's sudden appearance had momentarily aroused her. "Joel's got the turkey shut up in a coop, and the bakin' 's done, and I'm just a-fixin' them apples, and"—

"Oh, oh," cried Lida, who had fluttered to the window, "what glorious red leaves speckled over with little drops of gold! May I make some wreaths for the wall? Oh, please say yes!"

Mrs. Nisbett said "yes"—it would have been hard work to say "no" to Lida—and the girl soon came in, her apron full of the sprigs of the old maple tree, whose shadowy boughs kept the window veiled with cool shadows through the glaring summer days and showered fading gold upon the dead grass when the autumn came.

Mrs. Nisbett looked with tenderness upon the graceful little figure seated on the hearth rug, when the shine of the high heaped logs lost itself in her bright hair and made sparkles in her eyes, as the wreaths and trails of autumn leaves grew rapidly beneath her deft fingers.

"Lida," she said softly, "Lida, my dear!" Lida looked up.

"I saw your Aunt Constance yesterday, but there's somethin' reserved about her, and I didn't like to ask about you—whether you had decided to go out as a governess or not; because, my dear, Joel and I were talkin' last night, and we both thought what a comfort it would be to have you here."

"To have me here?"

"We're old and we're alone, and somehow we've both took a fancy to you, my child. So when your Aunt Constance goes back to the city, if you choose to come here"—

Mrs. Nisbett paused abruptly and burst into tears.

"We had a little girl once, my dear, and if she'd lived she would ha' been nigh about your age."

Lida let the leaves drop down on the floor as she sprang up and threw both arms round the old woman's neck.

"Oh, Mrs. Nisbett," she whispered softly, "you are so very, very kind. Believe me, I appreciate it all, but—but—I hardly know how to tell you."

Mrs. Nisbett listened intently. Lida smiled and cried a little and then whispered so low it was scarcely audible.

"I am going to be married."

"Married!" ejaculated Mrs. Nisbett, with all a woman's interest in this important piece of information. "And who to?"

"Your son lives in Iowa—in Parlington?"

"Yes."

"Well, did he ever mention the name of"—

Lida paused, her cheeks glowing roses. Old Nisbett had come in with an armful of wood, bringing a gale with him from the frosty outer world.

"I'll tell you by and by," whispered Lida as she went back to her work.

"Joel 'll go out again arter awhile," thought Mrs. Nisbett, "and then I'll hear about Lida's beau."

But Joel sat down before the fire with a complacent satisfaction which boded ill for the gratification of his wife's curiosity, and finally accompanied Lida home, thus frustrating all his wife's designs and cutting off her chance of hearing Lida's story.

"Dear me!" thought she. "I don't believe the man was ever born who knowed when he wasn't wanted! How lonesome it seems when Lida's gone! What does the girl want to get married for when I could ha' took such a sight o' comfort with her? Oh, dear, dear! It does seem as if the world was all askew!"

The next day, in spite of the weather prophet's prediction of snow, dawned clear and brilliant as the dying smile of Indian summer. By 11 o'clock Mrs. Nisbett was dressed in her best silk and cap, with the turkey browning beautifully in the oven and the cranberry tarts doing credit to themselves as well as to their maker, the table set, the fire high heaped with crackling logs and the plates dressed with coronals of autumn leaves. Aunt Constance, a tall, prim maiden lady of uncertain age, stood before the bedroom looking glass arranging her coiffure. Lida, in a blue dress with a late autumn rose in her hair, was tripping hither and thither as light footed and helpful as half a dozen household fairies merged into one, while Mrs. Nisbett stood regarding her with a loving eye, murmuring to herself:

"Well, well, it seems like it was the Lord's will to deny us of just what we most want, but if I had a daughter I could wish she was like Lida."

As the old kitchen clock struck 1 Mrs. Nisbett, looking from the window, gave a little cry.

"There he comes—there comes Joel, and, as I live, there's the boy with him!"

Lida ran into the bedroom.

When she returned, Mrs. Nisbett was clasped in the arms of a tall, handsome man of four or five and twenty.

"Lida," said the proud matron, striving to disengage herself from the affectionate clasp, "this is my son Stephen, and—why, what's the matter?"

For Stephen had dropped her hands with an exclamation of surprise and amazement, and Lida stood there glowing crimson.

"Lida! Why, mother, this is a surprise indeed that you have prepared for me!"

"I prepared!" echoed the astonished old lady. "Well, that's a good un, when I'm ten times as much surprised as you be! Lida, what does this mean?"

"It means," said Lida, with a demure smile—she was beginning to recover her scattered self possession—"it means that this is the gentleman I am to be married to!"

"Stephen!" cried Mrs. Nisbett, "is Lida to be your wife?"

"She has given me her promise to that effect, at least," said Stephen, looking proudly down upon his lovely little fiancee.

"Well, if it don't beat all how queer things do happen!" said Mrs. Nisbett, her face radiant. "And you've been livin' neighbor to me these six weeks and I never knowed it. Lida, why didn't you tell me?"

"Because I never dreamed that Stephen Risingham, my betrothed western lover, was anything to Mrs. Nisbett," said Lida, laughing.

"There 'tis, now!" ejaculated the farmer. "How was she to know that he was only my nephew, adopted when his parents died, twenty good years ago. We've always called him son, and he's always been a son to us. But Lida didn't know. Old woman, what do you say to Stephen's wife?"

Mrs. Nisbett clasped Lida to her heart.

"I do say," she ejaculated, "this is the thankfullest Thanksgivin' I ever lived to see!"—New York Daily News.

"THANKSGIVING day ten or twelve years ago," said a retired Sandy Hook pilot, "was altogether the most exciting twenty-four hours of my life, though it promised to be dull enough in the morning. It was before the New York pilots had combined with us and built the steam pilotboat New York, and we used to cruise about for vessels in small schooners.

"Such a cruise in a pilotboat would be tiresome to any one at any time; just then it was doubly so to me. For a couple of years I had been mightily interested in a good looking young woman. So far as I could see, the interest was mutual, and I had long had in mind suggesting to her a voyage on the sea of matrimony, with myself as pilot. I hadn't done it before because the girl's parents didn't seem to take kindly to a seafaring son-in-law. They allowed me to call upon their daughter once in awhile, but the air about the house when I was there made me think of storms till one evening early in November, just before I went out on this cruise. That evening, to my surprise, the mother invited me to eat Thanksgiving dinner with the family.

"There was a look in the girl's eyes that made me take courage when the mother gave the invitation, and I determined to settle the whole question on Thanksgiving day. The moral certainty of settling it the way I wished made me so happy at the beginning of the cruise that my pilot mates all noticed it. Our boat carried seven pilots, and I was fifth on the list, but I never dreamed there would be any trouble getting a ship in time to be ashore for Thanksgiving dinner.

He said he was going to furnish green turtle soup.

"We had bad luck from the beginning. On the second day out there was a big blow, and we had to run before the wind to save ourselves. It was three or four days, and we were 400 miles offshore at least, away out of the track of incoming vessels, before we dared put about. It was a full week before we were in position to look for ships, and even then we remained unlucky. There were plenty of ships coming in, but somehow they had nearly all picked up pilots before we sighted them. At the end of the second week only two of our men had left us. I was then third on the list, but I didn't worry as yet. By the day before Thanksgiving I was as sour as a spoiled pudding, and I couldn't crack a smile to save me. That afternoon two more of my mates got ships, so that I was next man to go, but as we were quite 200 miles out there wasn't a ghost of a show for me to get ashore in time for the dinner, even if I got a vessel early the next morning.

"Curiously enough, I felt a little better after I knew that I couldn't keep my engagement, and I began to take a lively interest in the steward's preparations for a Thanksgiving dinner at sea. He was a good cook and always prided himself on giving us something extra on holidays. This time he said he was going to furnish real green turtle soup to begin with and all the genuine Thanksgiving fixtures to follow.

"But just after midnight on Thanksgiving morning the sea suddenly stirred itself up rather worse than I have ever seen it before or since. In fact, our boat pitched so badly that we all awoke and couldn't go to sleep again.

"'Sail ahead! Full rigged ship on the weather bow!'

"That was my chance. I'd have preferred a steamer to a sailing vessel, of course, for there was no telling how long it would require to take a windjammer in. The signals showed that a pilot was wanted, and the crew made ready to put a small boat overboard.

"Just as the oarsmen were carefully working up toward the big vessel so that I could grasp the swinging ladder and climb on board a big wave came along and dashed the boat against the ship's side. In an instant the boat was crushed like an eggshell and we were all in the water. I thought I was going straight to Davy Jones, and I swallowed about a barrel of brine. Suddenly I came to the surface. A line had been thrown and was just in front of me. I grasped it and was hauled aboard more dead than alive.

"I took the ship in all right in spite of my mishap, and when I got to New York found the girl's father waiting at the pilots' office for news of me. Then I knew what the answer to my delayed question would be. It hadn't been a bad Thanksgiving after all."

BILL'S THANKSGIVING DINNER

He was called "Bill the Eater" in the east, in the west was known as "the man with the appetite," and the north and south agreed that "Hungry Bill" was a name that fitted him down to the ground. Bill cared very little, however, what he was called so long as he got a call to dinner occasionally. On his tramps through the country he had eaten at many a farmer's table, but on only one occasion had his appetite been satisfied. As he was sitting down to the table with a family one day the house took fire, and there was a rush for outdoors—that is, all fled except Bill. It was the opportunity of his life. He realized it, and when he was carried from the burning building an hour later half suffocated and with hair and whiskers burned off he had no complaint to make. For once in his life he had eaten what he called a square meal.

As a rule Bill avoided the large cities, but he always made it a point to be in one of them on Thanksgiving in order to take advantage of the free dinners usually provided for the poor. Year before last he ate his turkey in Boston, but last year he decided to feast in New York. Bill was seated in City Hall park when Charity came along and invited him to a free Thanksgiving dinner, and he was fit and ready to eat the meal of his life. He did not accept the invitation with undue haste, however, and thus give himself away. He permitted himself to be urged a little and conveyed the impression that one helping would fill him up and send him away to make room for another.

It was 1 o'clock in the afternoon when the festive board and the unfestive Bill squared off at each other. If Charity expected him to rush things, then Charity was disappointed. He had all the time there was, and he was aware that Thanksgiving only comes once a year. When urged to eat all he wanted, he replied that he would pick a bone or two, thank you, and merely toyed with the food before him. At 2 o'clock, however, Bill was still there, and as he began to strike his gait there were some whispered remarks about the danger of overeating. At 3 o'clock the tramp had taken the edge off his appetite, and at 4 he was eating in earnest.

Then a mild attempt was made to choke him off or to get him to choke himself to death, but Bill had decided to have some dinner. At 5 o'clock it was necessary to close the hall. The idea was to close Bill and the hall simultaneously, but he said he had dropped in to get a mouthful to eat, and they gave him half an hour's grace. He wanted more, but the committee was firm, even drawing him away from the board and escorting him to the door. Then, as Bill looked back with longing eyes at a mince pie he had been obliged to leave behind, he sighed and observed:

"I was told that this was to be a Thanksgiving spread to make us all thankful. I was given to understand there would be something to eat and drink and that no one would be turned away hungry. It is needless to say that I believe you acted from proper motives, but you can see for yourselves that you have made a sad failure of it. I will now walk up Fifth avenue and try to beg enough food to keep me from starving. Good day to you! I'll see you again next Thanksgiving."

"Not if I see you first!" replied Charity when she could get her breath.

Col. Wm. J. Harvey, a president of Wilkesbarre's city council, who will long be remembered for his great work for the city, was once a mere physical wreck, torn in every muscle and nerve from the frightful pains caused by rheumatism. He consulted the best physicians, went abroad, took mud baths, and almost every known treatment for the disease. A friend had had a very similar experience and Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy had cured him, so he recommended this great kidney medicine to Col. Harvey and he is to-day a well man, hale and hearty. He writes straight to the point:

DR. DAVID KENNEDY,

Dear Sir:—This is to certify that I was permanently cured of rheumatism by the use of Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy.

REFUSED INTERVIEW.

Mr. Mitchell and His Associates Denied Hearing By Anthracite Coal Road Men.

DECISION CREATES SURPRISE.

Coal Strike Troubles Will Now Go Back to Commission for Settlement. Arbitrators Will Resume Hearing of the Case Next Tuesday.

Washington, Nov. 26.—All prospects for an understanding between the United Mine Workers and the coal operators, outside the anthracite coal strike commission, came to a sudden termination late yesterday afternoon, through the receipt of a dispatch to Mr. Wayne MacVeagh, representing the Pennsylvania Coal company and the Hillside Coal and Iron company, notifying him that at a meeting of the anthracite coal road men in New York yesterday it had been decided not to grant an interview to Mr. Mitchell and his associates, which had been suggested for Friday next. The announcement, coming as it did after an all-day conference in this city between Mr. MacVeagh and Mr. Mitchell and his associates, attended part of the time by Carroll D. Wright, in an endeavor to adjust some details of the proposed agreement between the operators and miners, completely surprised everyone here. From a reliable source it is learned that the proposition that the operators meet Mr. Mitchell on Friday next was made at the instance of Mr. MacVeagh, who was no less surprised than Mr. Mitchell himself at the turn affairs took yesterday. From statements made by Mr. Darrow early in the day the impression had spread that a complete agreement would be effected at yesterday's conference, but when the meeting broke up Mr. Darrow read to the newspaper men in the corridor outside his room in Willard's hotel a statement which made it clear that no final agreement had been reached and that no further conferences were likely. The statement was as follows:

"The conference today was simply a continuation of the conferences held at Scranton and with precisely the same object—that of trying to reach a basis of hopeful discussion for an amicable settlement. Mr. MacVeagh has not been in Scranton since Thursday and some matters developed as to which further conference might be useful before either the operators or the representatives of the miners approach the serious task of formulating a definite agreement for their signatures."

Mr. Mitchell, when shown the dispatch from New York telling of the action of the operators, simply smiled and said that he had not asked for the conference, but that when it was suggested to him if it would be agreeable to meet the operators he said it would. Mr. Darrow and Mr. Lloyd, however, were outspoken regarding the action of the operators. Mr. Darrow said that it was now "up to the operators" and that he would return at once to Scranton, and on Tuesday next would appear before the committee, ready to go on with the hearing. Mr. Lloyd, holding in his hand the Associated Press dispatch, referred to the fact that Friday's conference had been suggested in order to adjust some matters on which there was still some disagreement. "Yet," said Mr. Lloyd, "these same men, who only last week wired the commission their assent to the general provisions of the tentative agreement and upon the strength of which the commission adjourned for a week in order to give the parties time to get together, now go completely back on their former action and call it all off. We are satisfied to go before the commission and continue the hearing." Messrs. Mitchell, Darrow and Lloyd left here at 6:50 over the Pennsylvania railroad for Scranton.

Scranton, Nov. 26.—The independent operators' committee, on their return from New York last night, were all gladness and smiles.

"We have won our point," said Dr. J. M. Rice, of the Riverside Coal company. "We are ready to show to the public that we are paying all the wages our business warrants and that an agreement with John Mitchell's organization is undesirable because of its un-American ideas. The big companies have come to our way of thinking and a settlement 'out of court' is no longer a possibility." Other members of the committee spoke in a similar strain.

As viewed from this point the hearings will be proceeded with on Dec. 3 as if the recess of the commission was nothing more than an adjournment to give the interested parties an opportunity to spend Thanksgiving at home.

ENORMOUS RAILROAD FIGURES.

Preliminary Report of Interstate Commerce Commission Shows Increased Earnings.

Washington, Nov. 26.—The preliminary report of the interstate commerce commission on the income account of railways in the United States for the year ended June 20, last, contains returns of railway companies operating 195,945 miles of line, or probably 98 per cent of the total railway mileage of the United States. The passenger earnings of these railways were $472,429,165, and the freight earnings $1,200,884,603. Including these and other earnings from operation, gross earnings amounted to $1,441,754,200, or $8,736 per mile of line, and operating expenses, $1,106,134,405, or $5,645 per mile of line, showing that net earnings were $605,616,795, or $3,091 per mile. The net earnings were $51,395,421 greater than during the previous year.

The total income of the operating roads of the country, including $82,714,492 derived from investments and miscellaneous sources, was $688,331,287. The deductions from income aggregated $458,459,961. This amount comprised interest on funded debt, rent of leased lines, betterments charged to income, taxes ($49,426,675) and various minor expenditures. The dividends declared on stocks amounted to $150,685,959, substantially $29,834,690 greater than for the previous year. The surplus from the operations of the roads was $79,185,367. The complete report of the previous year gave a surplus of $84,764,782. As this report relates to operating roads only, it does not include dividends paid by leased lines from the income they receive as rental.

MISTRESS DOROTHY TREDWELL was a very angry old lady and looked it. Red spots glowed in her cheeks, that usually were nearly as white as her silvery hair, her thin lips were drawn in a pale straight line, and her eyes flashed fire, yet pride and conscious obligation to ancestry, breeding and social position forbade sacrifice of her dignity by free expression of her feeling.

"So," she said, with painful suppression of her wrath, "your wish to spend the day with Mary Wallace was a deliberate falsehood, uttered for betrayal of my confidence, to make opportunity for your doing this shameful thing!"

"It is not a shameful thing for a girl to marry the man she loves," protested the handsome, tearful young woman kneeling before her. "I did not want to deceive you, but you made me do so, you were so unreasonable and unsympathetic."

"Unreasonable because I knew best what was for your good; unsympathetic because I did not want my child to throw herself away on a nobody."

"Pardon me, Mistress Tredwell," spoke up a tall, good looking young man who had until now kept silent in the background since his introduction by Priscilla as my "husband, Nathan Gordon." And, though the lady quite ignored him, he continued, "The Gordons are as old and good a family as the Tredwells, and I'm sure I have brought no disgrace on the name."

She suffered mentally as never before.

Priscilla resumed: "You wanted me to marry Abner Parker, though I told you I hated him, and forbade my even seeing Nathan, whom I loved. Don't be unkind, mother, dear. I love you none the less for loving Nathan. You married the man of your choice, and I have done the same; that is all. Will you not forgive me?"

"No, I will not. Go your ways and let me see you no more. As you have made your bed, so you shall lie. Priscilla Tredwell is no more for me, and I do not wish to know Mistress Nathan Gordon."

"Come, wife," said the young man, with a touch of brusqueness in his manner. "Demean yourself no more. We are only wasting time here. We will be happy despite her." And, masterfully drawing her arm within his, he led her out, with no backward look or word of farewell.

"Oh, Sister Dorothy," wailed a quavering voice as a woman several years older than Mistress Tredwell came from the dark corner where she had been silently weeping, "we'll never see Priscilla any more! And she was the last. How can we two old women keep Thanksgiving alone tomorrow?"

"Sister Sally, don't be a fool!" snapped Dorothy.

Truly it was a mockery of a Thanksgiving dinner to which the old ladies sat down the next day. A heavy snowstorm during the preceding night served as an excuse for Mistress Tredwell remaining home from church service.

The almost round table bore substantial and dainty viands enough to feed a dozen, but the two old women sat down to it alone. They bowed their heads while Mistress Dorothy said grace, inaudibly and briefly. Then Jane, the "hired help," brought in the soup.

"Oh, Sister Dorothy," exclaimed Sally tearfully, "I can't eat! I don't see how you can have the heart to, I'm sure I don't."

"Sally, don't be a fool," retorted Dorothy sharply. But that habitual injunction for once failed of its usually repressive effect upon Sally's demonstrations of emotion.

"I don't care what you say now, Dorothy. I just must speak. I'm heartbroken. Five years ago there were four leaves more in this table. Reuben was with us then, dear boy! Oh, God knows where he is now! And so was Rebecca—and, oh, the house has never been the same since she went away!"

Mistress Tredwell, with a fine affectation of placid unconcern, went on taking her soup, but the hand that held the spoon would tremble.

Sally went on: "You set your face like a flint against Reuben marrying the girl he loved, and she was as good a girl as ever was, only you must needs try to compel him to take another. Manlike, he did as he was a mind to, and you lost him. Only three extra leaves were wanted in the table the next two Thanksgivings. Then the same thing happened with Rebecca. You tried to make her marry David Purcell, who hadn't a thing but his money to recommend him, and, having, like you, an iron will that would rather break than bend, she went off, and you've never heard of her since."

"You have," interrupted Dorothy, with a sudden flush of color and a flash in her eyes.

"Yes, thank God, I have! The dear girl has written to me again and again, but she made me promise on the Bible that I'd never tell you a word about her until you asked, and have you ever asked?"

Dorothy closed her lips tightly.

"No, you haven't, and for all you know she may have starved or gone wrong."

"And I do not ask now," firmly replied the obdurate mother.

"Then two extra leaves were more than enough, for only Priscilla was left. And now she's gone. Oh, you unhappy woman, can you not see that because they are your children you cannot drive them?"

"May I help you to some of the turkey?"

"No, Dorothy; I can't eat!" cried Sally, bursting into tears and making a precipitate retreat from the table.

Mistress Tredwell kept her seat, took a slice of the turkey's breast, helped herself to the cranberry jelly and nibbled a stalk of celery, but her eating was only a pretense—pride's bluff against loneliness and misery. For a long time she sat motionless, staring at vacancy until her eyes filled with tears, which she dashed angrily away, as if ashamed of them.

Two Thanksgivings went by upon which there was no commemorative dinner in the Tredwell mansion, and a third dawned with no happier promise. As upon the morning after Priscilla achieved her independence, the ground was covered deeply by new fallen snow, but this time it did not prevent Mistress Dorothy Tredwell going to church. Warmly wrapped, she went in the cutter, driven by the hired man John.

Perhaps something in the sermon touched the hard old woman's heart; possibly the sight of the happy families filling the church—families swollen at this season to abnormal size by the annual gathering of loved ones from far and near—brought home to her a new realization of the miserable loneliness of her old age. At all events, she was conscious of suffering mentally as she never had before, for at last the doubt had risen in her mind whether her unhappy condition was not of her own making instead of a mysterious dispensation of Providence which had afflicted her with exceptionally disobedient and unfeeling children, the latter being the view she had long cultivated. "Pardon and forgive me, O God, if the fault has been mine," she moaned while walking slowly from the gate to her gloomy and cheerless home. Sighing, she opened the front door; then stood transfixed by astonishment. It seemed to her that she heard echoing in the hall musical peals of childish laughter. She stood listening in doubting wonder. Yes, the laughter was real, and with it mingled Sister Sally's aged treble, prattling baby talk in the parlor. Cautiously she glided to and peered through the door, which stood a little ajar.

Sally sat upon the floor, embracing a sturdy golden haired little child that was patting with its fat hands her withered cheeks and laughing loudly.

"Children always loved her better than me. Even my own did so, I believe," jealously thought the hungry hearted woman at the door.

Then a fresh, melodious voice full of a mother's tenderness called from the unseen part of the room behind the door: "Come, pet; back to mamma, Ransom. Come now."

Mistress Tredwell gasped and pressed a hand upon her heart at the hearing of that voice, and something dimmed her sight so that she could hardly see the baby, with anxiety in his blue eyes and laughter still wreathing his cherry lips, swaying, balancing, venturing slowly step by step his great feat of toddling across the floor. The old lady threw open the door, and with steps almost as unsteady as the child's tottered to the little fellow, fell upon her knees and clasped him to her breast, sobbing, "God has forgiven me!"

"Oh, mother, mother! I'm so glad!" cried the young woman, Priscilla herself, kneeling to embrace her two dear ones, while Ransom, evidently thinking it all excellent play, crowed with delight and cuddled close to the elder woman, making believe to escape capture by mamma.

"I was just determined, mamma, that you should see baby. I didn't believe you could and stay angry with me," said Priscilla when the excitement of greeting was a little calmed.

"You have named him after your father?"

"Yes, mamma. Nathan wanted to as much as I did. Nathan is real good, mamma. Indeed he is. And I want you to forgive him too."

"Gladly, my child! I wish he were here."

"He will be in a minute. He's sitting in the barn waiting for his welcome."

"Let him wait no longer."

Aunt Sally, nimbly almost as in the days of her youth, ran out to call him. When he was brought and his welcome assured, Sally asked, "Now, Dorothy, wouldn't you like to know about the others?"

"Yes, Sally, I would."

"Thank God, it has come to you at last! Here are letters and Thanksgiving greetings from both. They're too far off to come, but send their love. And there's a picture of Rebecca's two children. They do look sort of shameless, but her husband is consul in a hot country, where, she says, the children all go around that way, even in November."

"Oh, Priscilla!" exclaimed her mother, "if I had only known you were coming! We have got out of the way of having Thanksgivings, and there isn't a bite in the house fit to eat today."

"I'll see if I can't scare up something," said Sally hopefully, going out to see, and presently, when she called them into the dining room, the big table, with all its four extra leaves, was seen to be none too large for the dinner she had "scared up." There were a splendid salmon and a magnificent turkey, so big, brown and fragrant that the mouth watered at the sight, and there were mince and pumpkin pies and what not else that is sacred to New England's happiest festal occasion. And when Mistress Dorothy saw it all, she cried to Sally: "Oh, you old conspirator! Of course you knew in advance, and this explains why you've been over at Mrs. Green's nearly all the time for three days. But I forgive you."

BLOOD WINE

Cures Bright's Disease

John T. Foster.

Kidney diseases, including Bright's, is gaining an alarming foothold upon Americans, and the percentage of deaths all over the country in 1902 shows a big increase. The slightest tendency to weakness of the kidneys, indicated by lameness, soreness, pains, bearing-down sensation across the small of the back, cloudy, colored, having a sediment or otherwise unnatural appearance of the urine, is sufficient proof that something is wrong. If you take "Blood Wine" for your kidneys it will astonish you with its quick and thorough action. It has a specific action on the kidneys simultaneously with its effect upon the blood, and will check an approaching disease of the kidneys, as well as drive off an old chronic case.

Mrs. M. E. Thayer of North Brookfield, Mass., says:

"I have been troubled with rheumatism and my kidneys for more than ten years, been treated without much help. My back ached until I was almost crazy, with swelling of the feet and limbs. I tried your 'Blood Wine,' and the first bottle helped me. After taking the second bottle my back quit aching, and the fifth bottle brought about a thorough cure."

Mr. John T. Foster, of Manchester, N. H., speaks as thousands speak:

"'Blood Wine' is truly a most remarkable medicine. In my case its work has been little short of a miracle. For some time I suffered with rheumatism and kidney disease, of a most painful and advanced type. I tried about everything, without relief, and expected the same result from 'Blood Wine,' but fortunately for me when I struck 'Blood Wine,' I struck the Rock of Gibraltar. It stood my severe test and conquered my trouble and today I am a well man, due wholly to this great medicine. To my mind there is absolutely nothing that will compare with it, and I have no hesitation in advising any one in ill health to give it a thorough test."

Fifty cents a bottle.

THANKSGIVING ....POETRY

BACK to the home of childhood,
Though scattered far and wide,
Back to the dear old kitchen—
Yes, back to your mother's side.
Come, kiss her wrinkled forehead,
Her hair, as white as snow,
And sit down on her old stool,
As in the long ago.

While father bends above you
Weak with the weight of years,
His trembling voice with gladness,
His dim eyes filled with tears.
To both the greatest pleasure
The year brings on its way
Is this: The glad homecoming
Upon Thanksgiving day.

Once more the rooms re-echo
From kitchen, stairs and hall,
The sound of old time voices
And merry dinner call,
While many sweet grandchildren,
With laughter light and gay,
Come pressing round the table
This glad Thanksgiving day.

THE GLAD HOMECOMING.

So come, ye sons and daughters,
From restless city strife;
Come ere you lose your relish
For the quiet joys of life;
Come back, ye roving children,
From prairies far and wide
And cluster round the hearthstone
Once more at eventide.

Take up your song of childhood
And sing it o'er again;
Forget that ye are matrons
Or business loving men,
And if your eyes grow misty
Rejoice that it is so;
A heart sincerely tender
Is the purest one to know.

Remember, with your loved ones
Life's lamp doth feebly burn;
Your parents may not linger
To greet a late return.
Forget them not, though patient;
Oh, come now while you may!
Praise God; rejoice together
On this Thanksgiving day.
—Good Housekeeping.

Soliloquy of a Turkey.

I know that Thanksgiving day's most here,
And it makes me long to fly,
For I've reached my prime, and it's mighty clear
That it's time for me to die.

I saw the head of the house come out,
And he smiled as he gazed at me,
And he cried aloud that there was no doubt
What a comfortable meal I'd be.

Oh, I've got to go! And it gives me a fit,
Though it isn't so much for my life
That I care about, but he can't carve a bit,
And I've got to be hacked by his wife.
—New York Herald.

Sad Time For Them.

Of what are the turkeys thinking
Out yonder in the yard,
With their red eyes sadly blinking?
Do they think their fate is hard?
Are they on life reflecting
And to hear their final call
Each moment now expecting?
No; turkeys don't think at all.

Thanksgiving Trust.

Lord, I give thanks!
Last year, thou knowest, my best ambitions failed;
My back with scourgings of defeat was flailed;
My eyes felt oft the sharp salt wash of tears;
No guerdon blessed the tireless toil of years;
Fast in the snares my helpless feet were tied,
Yet in my woes thou didst with me abide.
Lord, I give thanks!
—Susie M. Best in Lippincott's.

His Preference.

"What portion of the fowl do you prefer?"

"Oh, anything but the Napoleon, sir!"

"What do you mean?" asked Carver, with a start.

"I mean I do not want the bony part."
—Detroit Free Press.

An Unknown Quantity.

She searched through the lexicon once and again,
And her face wore sad lines of misgiving.
"I was seeking," she said, with an accent of pain,
"The Spanish for our word 'Thanksgiving.'"
—Boston Journal.

Not In a Good Set.

"No," exclaimed the mother turkey, "I would prefer my children not to associate with those incubator chicks."

"Because they are so heedless and don't know how to feather their own nests?" inquired the duck.

"No, it isn't that so much I have brooded over," replied the turkey, "but there's something so artificial about them."

However, when the incubator chicks heard this they thought of the funeral baked meats of Thanksgiving and remarked significantly, "Death levels all ranks."—New York Journal.

Gentlemen,—I consider

Dr. Caldwell's (Laxative) Syrup Pepsin

by far the most reliable and efficacious remedy I have ever known for dyspepsia and kindred stomach disorders. Mild and gentle in its action, it does not simply relieve, but cures permanently. It does not nauseate, as so many medicines are apt to do, but can be used in severe cases when almost anything else would distress one. Several of my friends who have used it have had the same very satisfactory results I have, and I therefore feel it is well worthy of highest endorsement.

Very truly yours,
M. C. DALTON, 311 Illinois St.

BLOOD DISEASE CURED.

Cured When all Else Failed

"Could I live my early life over, this testimonial would not be necessary, though I was no more sinful than thousands of other young men. Early indiscretions, later excesses, exposure to contagious diseases all helped to break down my system. When I commenced to realize my condition I was almost frantic. Doctor after doctor treated me but only gave me relief—not a cure. Hot Springs helped me, but did not cure me. The symptoms always returned. Mercury and Potash drove the poison into my system instead of driving it out. I bless the day your New Method Treatment was recommended to me. I investigated who you were first, and finding you had over 25 years' experience and responsible financially, I gave you my case under a guarantee. You cured me permanently, and in six years there has not been a sore, pain, ulcer or any other symptom of the blood disease."

19TH YEAR. NO. 280. EAST LIVERPOOL, O., WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 26, 1902—TWELVE PAGES. TWO CENTS.

SUIT AGAINST C. A. SMITH DECIDED IN HIS FAVOR IN THE COURT AT LISBON

Judge Holds That the Dissatisfied Mine Stockholders Have No Ground on Which to Stand.

A decision was handed down in common pleas court yesterday by Judge W. W. Hole, in which the citizens of East Liverpool generally are much interested.

July 17, 1902, J. G. English, of Danville, Ill., and J. F. English, of Sumter, Ore., filed a suit in common pleas court against C. A. Smith, of East Liverpool and Pittsburg, for $343,907.12 damages. The plaintiffs alleged in their petition that Smith took an option on 980,000 shares of the Golconda Mining company, of Sumter, Ore., and that he agreed to pay for the stock $400,000. When he took this option, it is alleged, the company was reorganized in Smith's interest and he was elected president.

The agreement was that Smith was to contribute to the mining company the sum of $3,500 per month for one year from January 29, 1901, to be used in sinking the shaft 100 feet deeper and otherwise developing the mine.

The plaintiffs' claims were that he sunk the shaft only 90 feet and left the mine in a greatly damaged and unsafe condition; that Smith used the receipts from the sale of gold to develop the mine instead of declaring a dividend and that he did not contribute $3,500 per month to the company; that he carried away assay certificates and machinery belonging to the company; that he never formally surrendered the option, but abandoned the mine on December 1, 1901, and that they took charge of the mine and declared the option at an end on March 5, 1902. They allege they were put to much expense and were unable to sell the stock to as good advantage as they otherwise might and claim that they were damaged by Smith's failure to comply with the agreement.

At the time the suit was filed Mr. Smith retained able counsel and at once filed a demurrer and from the decision of the court in this hearing, it would seem the claim of Mr. Smith made then was well founded. He insisted that the plaintiffs had suffered no considerable damage, and said that he had agreed to reimburse them for the loss, but that no satisfactory agreement could be made.

In his decision Judge Hole sustained the demurrer in detail with the exceptions.

FOUR VICTIMS OF ROBBERY

Thieving Operations Carried On at Two Different Boarding Houses.

A BOARDER WHO SKIPPED

Is Suspected In One Instance—Three Reports Having Lost a Bank Roll. Young Men Suffered Loss—Woman Of $40.

Two daring robberies which occurred in the city yesterday morning have been reported to Chief Thompson.

While three well known young men, William Boone, Mark Tuesberry and William Smith, were absent from their room at Mrs. Ella May Robinson's boarding house, 119 Seventh street, yesterday morning someone entered the apartment and stole valuables amounting to $50. The thieves ransacked every drawer, pocket, valise and trunk in the room and was at no time interrupted in his nefarious work. As a result of the theft Boone lost a gold watch and chain, valued at $36.50; Tuesberry a gold ring valued at $10 and Smith a revolver valued at $4. The exact hour that the robbery was committed is not known but it was after 9 o'clock and before noon.

When the three men went to their room at the noon hour they readily discovered that some one had been trifling with their belongings and upon an investigation discovered their loss.

They are confident that they know who the person is that stole from them, but as the suspect has left the city they do not expect him to be captured and they have given up thought of ever regaining their valuables.

The suspect arrived in the city last Friday from Beaver county, Pa., and applied at the Robinson boarding house for both board and lodging. He gave his name as Evans and said that he was a machinist by trade. He had no money and put off the landlady with the excuse that his trunk would be here in a few days and then he would have sufficient money. The man man left the city yesterday without notifying Mrs. Robinson and the conclusion is reached that he is the guilty party. The police have been given a true description of the man and have been ordered to arrest him if seen on the streets.

An unknown woman at police headquarters this morning stated that some individual entered her room, which is located in the old Davidson opera house yesterday morning and stole a roll of bills amounting to over $40. She has no idea who committed the theft and the police are absolutely without a clue. The act was done while she was in another part of the building. It is said that the woman is employed at the Wallace & Chetwynd pottery.

OHIO TAX LAWS AND CORPORATIONS

Reasons Assigned for the Numerous Charters Granted in West Virginia.

AN EAST LIVERPOOL CASE

Newell Purchase Taken By a Correspondent as an Indication That This City May Lose Its Potteries—Taxes Not Heavy.

"Despite the apparent success of the franchise tax laws of last winter," says a Columbus special to the Cincinnati Enquirer, "there lingers a doubt as to the ultimate effect as revenue raisers. It was only a day or two ago that a leading coal company reduced its capital stock from millions to a beggarly $150,000. The reports from West Virginia show that more Ohio concerns are obtaining charters there than ever before. But the strangest performance of Ohio capitalists up to date is shown by the incorporation of the American Manufacturing company of Chester, W. Va. The purpose of this company is to mill, mine and manufacture articles incident to or connected with the glassware, brick, porcelain and pottery business.

"The incorporators include well-known capitalists, stockholders and officials of the Laughlin China company, the Knowles, Taylor & Knowles company and the Knowles Pottery company, of East Liverpool, some of the individuals being W. E. Wells, E. M. Knowles, Colonel John N. Taylor, G. W. Clark and Joseph G. Lee, of that city. It is stated that these gentlemen, in connection with certain Pittsburg capitalists, intend to found a new pottery town on the West Virginia side of the Ohio river, opposite East Liverpool. They have paid $75,000 for 450 acres of land just below the little town of Chester and will begin work on the factory buildings as soon as possible.

"The conclusion reached by observers here is that these Ohio manufacturers desire to escape the heavy taxation that is now their portion in this state. There is plenty of land in the neighborhood of East Liverpool for the extension of their present plants. Should it mean the transference of the pottery industry to the other side of the river the blow would be a severe one to East Liverpool and Columbiana county, for both virtually depend upon it for prosperous conditions. Homer Laughlin, who is at the head of the china company bearing his name, is now virtually a resident of Los Angeles, Cal., where he lives in the baronial mansion erected by the late Dr. Leslie Keely, the founder of the "gold cure" for the drink habit. He has also erected a number of office buildings in the business section of the busiest city on the California coast outside of San Francisco."

Concerning the above the News Review's Columbus correspondent writes: "One of the political wiseacres at the state capital claims to see in the incorporation of the American Manufacturing company, of Chester, W. Va., under the laws of that state, a scheme on the part of the leading pottery manufacturers of East Liverpool to transfer their plants from that city to Chester for no other purpose than to escape the tax of one-tenth of 1 per cent imposed on corporations under the Willis law. The amount which the Knowles, Taylor & Knowles company pays under this tax is $1,000. Payment is made to the secretary of state and is by him transferred to the state treasury."

W. E. Wells, one of the officers of the new company was interviewed by a News Review reporter at noon today and said: "There doubtless have been a number of companies incorporated in West Virginia recently. They may have done so on account of the tax rates in Ohio, and it is possible many more may take out papers in that state on account of the iniquitous tax regulations."

He was brought to East Liverpool and a physician dressed the injury. He was taken to his father's home near Calcutta. Mr. Burcaw is well known in Chester, having moved from there to his present home last spring.

TILT OF THREE COUNCILMEN ENLIVENS THE PROCEEDINGS AT CITY FATHERS' MEETING

Arrangements Will Be Effected Soon For Setting the New Code Machine in Operation.

The meeting of council was enlivened last night by a tilt between the two oldest members of the body, and the brisk interchange of words had a good effect upon the younger representatives. Whatever may be the faults of Uncle Joe Barlow, of the Second, lack of sincerity is not one of them, and when his word was questioned by George Peach, of the Third, Mr. Barlow sailed in and "trimmed him up properly." Uncle Joe had been arguing in favor of making amends for the damage to the property of Thomas Chadwick, of Lincoln avenue. This was not a new subject to Mr. Barlow. Many a time and often within the past few months he has explained to the council that something should be done with the Chadwick lot.

At the last meeting the engineer was instructed to prepare an estimate of the probable cost to the city of making the property safe, for the winter at least. Engineer Kelly had the figures ready last evening, and when he said about $192.50 would cover the expense, Uncle Joe and a majority of the members were in favor of going ahead with the work at once.

Mr. Marshall could not see the matter in any other light than a "graft," as he expressed it, and this did not have a tendency to make the Second ward member any easier in his mind. He allowed that when the subject of "grafts" suggested itself to a man, he must be a little "grafty" on his own account, and ventured the assertion that there had been others.

George Peach, of the Third ward, here rung in with the information that an appropriation for an improvement such as had been suggested would be illegal. He declared he would be as much in favor of doing something for the relief of Mr. Chadwick as anyone, but he did not purpose that illegal action should be taken.

"How about those little technicalities you have passed over, Mr. Peach? You know many illegal actions have been taken here," said Mr. Barlow.

Just at this point was where the fine works were due. Swinging his arms in the air, Mr. Peach defied the venerable Barlow to cite a case where he

MINE INSPECTOR MOVES QUARTERS

District Deputy Davis Has Moved From Dell Roy to Salem.

THE SALINEVILLE CHARTER

Lost to One of the Miners' Unions Probably Does Not End the Case The Men Objected to Working in Other Mines.

From a Staff Correspondent.

Columbus, November 26.—James P. Davis, deputy mine inspector for the Sixth district, composing the counties of Columbiana, Carroll, Mahoning, Portage, Trumbull and the township of Springfield in Jefferson county, has moved from Dell Roy, Carroll county, to Salem, which becomes headquarters of the district. His term expires next spring. Mr. Davis is on his second term. When State Mine Inspector Biddison took charge of the office two years ago last January he re-arranged the districts of the state and made one district out of portions of two districts in the southeastern part of the state, of which Mr. Davis and Reese T. Davis, of East Palestine, were deputy inspectors. Both were thrown into the same district and each applied for the deputyship. After considering the matter for several months State Inspector Biddison tendered the appointment to Mr. Davis, of Dell Roy. The salary is $1,200 per annum and expenses.

Secretary-Treasurer Savage, of the United Mine Workers of America, has returned from Salineville, where he went to secure the charter and seal of the local union, which was suspended for disobeying the orders of the organization. The members of the local refused to work with three Italians who were members in good standing of the state organization. The charter and seal were surrendered to the state official promptly. Mr. Savage said to the correspondent of this paper that he thought there would be more trouble and that the local would take steps to get reinstated. The Italians are working in another mine and he was assured that there would be no further discrimination against them. There are four other locals in Salineville, all in good standing.

Mr. Crew, a native of Butler township, Columbiana county, who is connected with the postmaster general's department at Washington, and Mr. Holloway, of Columbiana, employed in the postal department in this division, in company with five other postal officials, were in this city yesterday, inspecting mail catching cranes.

SMALLPOX SCARE VERY SHORT LIVED

House Was Quarantined Last Night and the Quarantine Raised Today.

THREE PHYSICIANS CERTAIN

That the Patient Is Not Afflicted With the Disease, Though Another Doctor Thinks Otherwise—Mrs. Barnes the Sufferer.

There was a flurry of excitement in the city this morning when it became generally known that Mrs. Anna B. Barnes, of 167 Church alley, was placed under quarantine last evening at about 9 o'clock, she having showed signs of smallpox.

Mrs. Barnes was pronounced afflicted with the terrible disease by Dr. W. J. Taylor, and it was upon his report to Health Officer Ogden that the house was quarantined. This afternoon, however, after examination was made by Drs. Ogden, Clark and Harrison, a diagnosis was reported to the effect that that she is not suffering with smallpox and Sanitary Policeman Burgess was ordered to relieve the guards and remove the sign from the door of the house.

One physician holding that the woman has the disease and three that she has not, it seems pretty safe to let the matter drop and cease fearing.

Dr. Taylor, when interviewed this afternoon by a News Review reporter, said: "Yes, sir, I pronounced the woman sick with smallpox or variloid, which in reality is the same, it being only a mild form. I have had much experience with smallpox and I don't believe I could be deceived. However, if I am mistaken I am truly glad of it, because I fully realize what a smallpox scourge to the city would mean. The woman came to my office last night and I made a careful examination of her sickness.

"Two signs which always accompany the disease were much in evidence with her. The familiar fumes which come from a patient filled my room when she was in it. And when I felt her forehead I discovered a never-failing sign. Under the skin I could distinctly feel scores of little raisings which to me are like bird shot. I have never treated a smallpox case in my life that the same feeling was not in evidence. You can quote me as saying that the woman is sick with the smallpox."

Every preparation was made to protect the residents of the city against the disease had it developed as at first reported. Officer Burgess had arranged with Otto Schmidtbauer and Hamilton Dailey to keep watch at the house, and Mayor Davidson announced this morning that he intended calling a meeting of the board of health for tonight to take steps in regard to the people who had association with the woman during the past few days.

A motion was filed yesterday afternoon for a new trial in the Kelly-McPherson damage suit. A date will be set soon on which to hear the arguments.

FOR THE PLAINTIFF

Judgment for $2,000 Was Given in Bradshaw Estate Case.

Lisbon, November 26.—(Special)—In the case of W. L. Smith, administrator of the Bradshaw estate in East Liverpool, a decision was given this morning by Judge Hole, the court holding that Theodore Bradshaw had made a warrantee deed to his mother in his life time for property mortgaged to its full value, and that, as the administrator had to pay this mortgage he had a right to collect the money paid from the party making the warranty deed, and judgment was rendered for the plaintiff for $2,000.

As matters now stand there is no rules upon which to work as Thanksgiving, 1902, is the only definite arrangement made.

HOUSES STANDING IN THE STREET

Many Complaints About Two Buildings That Encumber City's Thoroughfares.

ONE HAS STOOD LONG TIME

On Jefferson Street Near Fifth—Law on the Subject Found—No Building to Stand in the Street More Than Three Days.

Mayor Davidson, Chief Thompson and City Clerk Davidson for more than ten days past have been bothered almost every hour in the day with remarks of censure concerning the allowing of a building to stand intact in the middle of Jefferson street, near Fifth street. This morning their attention was called to another building which adorns the public highway on West Market street.

The three officials in question have been unable to advise the many who have registered objections and have also refrained from any words of repudiation, due to the fact that none were confident of the stand which they could take in the matter. According to an ordinance in the ordinance book held by the mayor the owner of the building which stands at Jefferson and Fifth streets has committed no wrong and cannot be held liable. He received a permit from the city clerk to remove the house and that was deemed sufficitnt However, this morning the officials were prompted to scour the 400 or more ordinances that are contained in the ordinance book and by so doing they discovered one that will result either in the removal of the buildings or the city will look to the owner for damages. The ordinance was passed October 4, 1897, and is styled "An ordinance to regulate the removal of any building over or upon any of the streets, alleys or public grounds of said city."

The ordinance in full is as follows:

"Section 1.—Be it ordained and enacted by the council of the city of East Liverpool, two-thirds of all members concurring, that no erson or persons shall remove or cause to be removed on, along or across any street, alley or public way within said city any dwelling house, business house, stable of other structure without having first obtained from the city clerk a written permit to do so.

"Section 2.—Upon applying for such permit and before the same shall be issued the person or persons seeking the same shall file in the office of the city clerk a bond in the sum of $500, payable to the city of East Liverpool for use of the party injured and with sufficient sureties to be approved by the city clerk, conditional that said person or persons shall fully repair any or all damages done to said street or other city or private property by the removal of said building and shall save and keep harmless the said city from and expense, loss or damages that it may sustain by reason of said building. The person or persons receiving such permit shall exercise the same, subject to all other grants and franchises granted to others by any ordinance or resolution of council.

"Section 3.—No person or persons removing such buildings shall permit the same to remain on any particular block on any street or public way for a longer period than three days, and a good and sufficient passage way for one vehicle shall at all times be provided on one side of said building.

"Section 4.—Any person violating any of the provisions of this ordinance shall be fined not less than $50 and not more than $100 and the costs of prosecution."

With the above ordinance to act upon there is likely to be something doing. For the one located at the corner of Fifth and Jefferson streets the owner simply has a permit to move it, and the building has stood in one position at least three times the number of days legally allowed. The one standing in West Market street was placed there without the owner even securing a permit, it is said.

Mayor Davidson frankly admitted that he did not know that there was an ordinance such as the above. In regard to it he said: "It simply makes the argument which I have voiced for two years stronger. When my attention was called to the fact that the building was standing in the street, I referred to the ordinance book which I am supposed to consult when all like problems arise. In that book I could find nothing that would give me power to order the removal of the building. I tell you the ordinances of the city must be codified. I find if I want to be certain of any ordinance, that I have first before me the task of scanning the 400 ordinances which do not appear in the book. I have advocated a recodification of the ordinances and am satisfied that many things will run as they should not if my suggestion is not heeded and that very soon."

KILLED A THOUSAND

Great Record Made By Two Hunters, But It Was Not This Year.

Salem, November 26.—The publication of an item concerning the 75th birthday anniversary of Aaron Wilson last Saturday has called to Mr. Wilson's mind a reminiscence of a season's hunt some 25 years ago. At that time, which was before the present restrictions of season limit of number of quail were in force, Mr. Wilson and the late Charles I. Hayes were very fond of hunting.

For years Messrs. Hayes and Wilson had been in the habit of hunting together, and at the beginning of one fall season one suggested to the other that they keep a record and at the end of the season figure up the number of quail and pheasant they had bagged. Accordingly, a board was tacked up at Mr. Wilson's stable, and each evening when they returned from a hunt each would tally the number of birds he had killed that day. This was kept up through the season, at the end of which the number was added up and it was found that the two had killed a total of 965 quail and 77 pheasants during the season. They did not count the rabbits taken.

Albert Hayes, the son of C. I. Hayes, still has the old muzzle-loading fowling piece which his father used to hunt with. Mr. Wilson disposed of his gun years ago. The elder Mr. Hayes takes a keen delight in hunting, and during his lifetime went out hunting numerous times during the season. Mr. Wilson says that the gun owned by Mr. Hayes has, in its time, killed more game than any other gun in the state.

EAST END

Pleaded Guilty to Stone-Throwing When He Had Nothing to Do With the Case.

About ten days ago the passengers on a northbound C. & P. trains were badly frightened when a rock came crashing through a window while the train was passing the Smith & Phillips pottery. Both the trainmen and the passengers thought the missile had been thrown with a malicious intent. Several small boys were at play along the track and it was evident that it had been thrown by one of them. A railroad detective was notified of the occurrence and was provided with a description of one of these boys, Roy, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Mel Martin, of Calhoun's addition.

The detective went to the East End and captured the lad, who was so badly frightened that he thought the only way to save himself was to admit his guilt. Later it was found out that the boy had nothing at all to do with the affair and he was released. It is not likely that other arrests will be made, because of the meagre description of the guilty party.

Wanted Interest on $1.06.

The case of J. E. Forbes versus James Parker was heard yesterday afternoon by 'Squire Carman. The suit grew out of a load of coal which the plaintiff claimed he sold and delivered to the defendant in December of last year. The defendant claims that the coal in question was not delivered, but made a tender of $1.06. The amount asked was $1.06 with interest, so the tender was refused and the case went to trial. Attorney J. E. Davis represented the plaintiff and W. E. Warren the defendant. The plaintiff was allowed the amount of the tender.

Rummage Sale a Success.

The bazaar and rummage sale in the P. H. C. hall last evening given by the Ladies' Aid society and the Young Ladies' guild, of the Erie street M. E. church, was a big success in spite of the unfavorable weather. The hall was thronged during the evening and the ladies were kept busy serving refreshments and disposing of the articles on the rummage tables. The pieces of art needle work contributed by the young ladies found a ready sale. The proceeds will amount to about $50.

Lecture Will be Interesting.

The free lecture Thanksgiving evening at the Second Presbyterian church promises to be interesting and entertaining. The lecturer, Rev. Alexander Sharp, of Mingo, spent eight years in the northern and western countries of South America as a missionary, and his talk will be of the life, character and religion of these people. The opportunity will be presented for a free will thank offering at this service.

Have a New Horse.

The street committee of the city council has provided the East End fire station with an additional horse, something that has long been needed by this department. The new animal is a handsome gray about 15 hands high and four years old. He has not been broken yet for fire department work. Captain Terrence has named him George, in honor of Councilman Peach, chairman of the street committee.

Beatty Improving.

Metch Beatty, whose finger was amputated a few days ago as the result of an injury from a wire received in the slip room of the Standard pottery, is reported to be improving nicely. Blood poisoning had set in, making it necessary to amputate the member. It will be several weeks before he can return to work.

A Correction.

A typographical error yesterday made it appear that the Thanksgiving supper and entertainment to be given in the P. H. C. hall Thursday evening is under the auspices of the I. O. O. F. It should have read I. O. O. C. There is no organization of the former in the East End.

EAST END AFFAIRS.

Dick McKane is a Pittsburg visitor today.

Henry Chambers left this morning for Pittsburg.

Miss Georgia Shingleton, of the warerooms at the National pottery, will sever her relations there this week, and Monday will leave for Wheeling where she will visit her aunt, Mrs. D. S. Stout, until after the holidays.

Stomachs on Stilts.

The man who puts on stilts does not increase his actual stature by the breadth of a hair. He feels taller while he's on the stilts, and when he's off them he feels shorter than he ever felt. Stimulants are the stilts of the stomach. They make a man feel better for the time being, but he feels a great deal worse for them afterward.

The need of the man whose stomach is "weak" is not stimulation but strength. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery perfectly answers that need. It cures the diseases of the digestive and nutritive system which make the stomach "weak." It enables the digestion and assimilation of food, so that the body receives the nutrition on which depends its strength.

"I took two bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery for stomach trouble," writes Clarence Carnes, Esq., Taylorstown, Loudoun Co., Va. "It did me so much good that I didn't take any more. I can eat most anything now. I am so well pleased with it I hardly know how to thank you for your kind information. I tried a whole lot of things before I wrote to you. A gentleman told me of your medicine, and how it cured his wife. Thought I would try a bottle of it. Am now glad that I did, for I do not know what I should have done had it not been for Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery."

The sole motive for substitution is to permit the dealer to make the little more profit paid by the sale of less meritorious medicines. He gains; You lose. Therefore accept no substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery."

The sluggish liver is made active by the use of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets.

MEETING OF CABINET.

Cuban Reciprocity and Canal Treaty With Colombia Principally Discussed.

ALL MEMBERS PRESENT BUT ONE

Secretary Hay Unable to Report Progress in Canal Negotiations. Suggested that Colombia Hopes to Profit by Lapsing of Franchise.

Washington, Nov. 26.—The cabinet meeting yesterday was devoted almost exclusively to the consideration of the status of the reciprocity treaty with Cuba and the canal treaty with Colombia. The hitches that have occurred in the negotiations were discussed, as were also the prospects of settlement.

Secretary Hay, while presenting the subject of the canal negotiations to the cabinet, was not able to report that any progress had been made during the past week. In fact, it appears that the negotiations have come to a dead stop, and while no such thing as an ultimatum has passed the precise situations may be described in the statement that the Colombian minister here, Concha, has distinctly informed the state department that he cannot in behalf of his government accept the last proposition of the United States as a basis of a canal treaty. The state department has already let it be known that it has come to the end of its concessions, so the chances of a renewal of negotiations in the near future are not very bright.

This state of affairs will stimulate the negotiations with Nicaragua and Costa Rica for the alternate route, but it now appears that diplomats of those countries are not disposed to allow themselves to be used to coerce Colombia, and therefore are desirous of remaining in the background until it shall be clearly established that no treaty can be made between Colombia and the United States.

One of the statements of fact in connection with the Panama route which has been brought to the attention of the state department is that original canal concessions will expire in 1904, and it has been suggested that the Colombian government has that fact in mind and is disposed to refrain from making a treaty now in the expectation that the franchise will lapse and it thus may be in a position to build the canal itself or to sell a new concession. Such a course will raise a very serious question between the Colombian government, the Panama Canal company, the French government and the government of the United States as to whether or not a supplementary decree extending the concessions 10 years from 1904 was valid.

President Roosevelt laid before the cabinet his annual message to congress in completed form. It was sent to the printer yesterday. Most of the features of the document were familiar to the members of the cabinet and only such parts of the message as had not been considered previously were read in full. All the members were present except Secretary Root.

Other Washington News.

The President and Mrs. Roosevelt entertained a large party of friends at dinner at the White House last night.

Charles V. Herdliska, United States consul at Callao, Peru, has tendered his resignation and it has been accepted.

Madame Duse, the Italian actress, was received by the president and Mrs. Roosevelt yesterday at the White House.

Brigadier General Charles C. Hood has been relieved at his own request. His successor will not be selected until congress meets.

Midshipman Aiken, who was injured in the Annapolis-Bucknell football game 10 days ago, was reported better yesterday, and hopes are now entertained for his recovery.

The remains of three officers of the army were interred in the Arlington national cemetery yesterday with the usual military ceremonies. These were Major Walter Reed, of the medical department; Captain John F. McBlain, Ninth cavalry, and Captain J. Y. Slow, a quartermaster of volunteers during the Civil War.

Justice Harlan, of the United States supreme court, on Dec. 9, will have completed 25 years of service as a member of that court, and his friends at the bar throughout the country have arranged to express their appreciation of his services by a dinner in his honor on that evening at the new Williard hotel in this city.

A cablegram received at the state department yesterday from Minister Squiers, at Havana, reports that the government is taking a firm stand and that the strike situation is better. The conditions in Havana are being watched with the closest interest here, as it is believed the Cuban government is about to be subjected to a severe test.

REASONS FOR GIVING THANKS.

Thanksgiving day, first celebrated almost 300 years ago by a little band of Puritans at Plymouth, is now observed in every country on earth where Americans have a permanent or even a temporary abiding-place. A purely American festival, its observance has become world-wide. The miners of Alaska, the soldiers in the Philippines, the citizens of Hawaii and Porto Rico, the American oil well drillers in Russia, the pioneers in new industrial enterprises in Africa and South America, will all celebrate the day with the same zest that marks the observance of the festival at home. Eeven in the government house at Calcutta, where a titled lady of American birth presides, there will be a Thanksgiving feast that will rival the best in the United States. Thanksgiving day will be the occasions for family reunions in every city, village and hamlet throughout the land and in scattered farm houses everywhere in the United States. It was instituted primarily as a farmers' festival, a period for rejoicing and expressing gratitude to Providence for good crops and other gifts that mean happiness and comfort to the recipients. It is still, in many a farm house, the one day of all the year most eagerly looked forward to by young and old and most feelingly and happily celebrated.

A contented mind and a sense of gratitude for manifold blessings are all that are necessary to the proper observance and proper enjoyment of the national festival. And nowhere in the world does contentment reign in more homes than here in America. If our forefathers, on the bleak Massachusetts coast, wresting crops by primitive means from an unfertile soil, exposed to disease and peril, with hostile savages as their only neighbors, with relatives and friends distant a journey of months across the wide ocean; if the Pilgrims who instituted Thanksgiving day could find anything for which to be thankful—and they found reasons in abundance for gratitude to God—how much, how infinitely much more, have the men, women and children of today, with comforts, luxuries and conveniences of which our ancestors never dreamed, to show appreciation of! Let us celebrate by rejoicing and being glad, forgetting for the time evil and annoyance; but amid our feasting and merriment let us not forget the origin of Thanksgiving day and the impressive lesson thereof and fail not to give thanks that our lot has been cast amid a glorious civilization and the peace, prosperity and progressiveness of the twentieth century, which is likely to be memorable as the greatest period of human advancement yet known in all history.

The greater Pittsburg idea is again finding favor in the Smoky city. If Pittsburg would extend her limits as Chicago has done, she would occupy a position on the census list commensurate with her importance as a commercial center. With present circumscribed limits this is an impossibility.

A New York woman is reported to have lived in luxury for 20 years on the proceeds of begging letters. Fortunate, those who value ease more than self-respect are comparatively few.

East Liverpool tolerates all sorts of rubbish on the streets with remarkable patience. But when it comes to blocking a main thoroughfare for weeks with a whole house it is no wonder they kick.

President Castro, of Venezuela, more enlightened than the average South American, has a good word for the United States and wants to help us enforce the Monroe doctrine when the time comes.

At this season the eagle is not in it. The turkey is the American bird. He is an American product, and we all admire him.

Herr Krupp left anywhere from $75,000,000 to 150,000,000, not a bad fortune for a gunsmith to accumulate.

Yes, East Liverpool needs a new city hall. But the need of paying some of the city's debt is more pressing.

WELLSVILLE

ONLY SIX PRESENT

And the Wellsville Council Meeting Was a Very Short One.

A five-minute meeting of council was held last evening at the city hall, at which time an ordinance levying assessments upon property benefited by the paving of Liverpool street and authorizing the issue of bonds in anticipation of the collection was passed upon its second reading. The ordinance will be passed finally at the regular meeting of council next Monday evening, while it is hoped that at least eight councilmen will be present. Only six were present last evening and for that reason no important business could be transacted.

It has been stated by a certain city official that were all of the councilmen to receive a compensation for attending the meetings, there would have been many more of them present than there were last evening. It is a hard matter to get council together, excepting on the regular meeting night, and it seems to make no difference if business of the most vital importance is to be transacted.

News and Notes About The Potteries

HUMOROUS POTTERY.

Pottery does not lend itself to humorous treatment. People, however, who have even the least sense of humor, says an exchange, must admit that they cannot look at some of the recent samples of humorous pottery without smiling. The quaint-looking faces and snug smiles on some of the imported Dutch cats, chiefly in majolica or a kind of Rouen ware, are enough to make even the most sedate person smile. The more recent English examples of cats in the act of singing, after the style of some lady amateurs, although in majolica and variously, are quaint enough to cause ripples, if not roars, of laughter. One cat stands on its front, and sits on its hind legs and tail, while it looks at one serio-comically, with its head half-screwed around. There are cats posing in all manner of grotesque positions. These, when tied up with yellow ribbon, are enough to make a funeral mute's face broaden into a smile. How sedate, also appears a rabbit dressed up as a parson! How comically thoughtful is an earthenware monkey modeled as though in the act of solving some Darwinian problem or intricate sum! China monkeys in grotesque attitudes, dogs twisting and turning themselves almost inside out, dogs imitating human eccentricities, and other animals posing in strange and unfamiliar attitudes, until one wonders whether our modelers or their models are troubled with "a little bit off the top."

NARROW ESCAPE.

Misses Margaret Russell and Celia Gray, fillers-in in the decorating department at Cartwright's, had a narrow escape yesterday at noon from a horrible death or serious injury. They were compelled to cross the railroad track to get to the pottery, but were confronted by a freight train that blocked the crossing. Not caring to wait for it to move along they determined to cross the track beneath the cars. No sooner had they started than the train began to move. Terribly frightened they made all possible haste and succeeded in reaching the other side before the wheels reached them. After this they will wait until the trains have passed before attempting to cross the tracks.

WELL EXPECTED IN.

The oil well on the property of Peter McDevitt, the popular dipper at the Thompson, has been sunk to a depth of several hundred feet and it is expected to reach the producing sand either today or tomorrow. Mr. McDevitt and his many friends at the plant are anxiously awaiting the outcome. The property is surrounded with wells that are producing oil in paying quantities.

PIECE WORK NOW.

A change in the method of pay went into effect in the decorating department at Cartwright's Monday. Only transferring crews are effected. Heretofore they have been paid by the day, but under the new plan it will be all piece work. The prevailing scale of prices has been adopted and the new plan is proving much more satisfactory to the girls and the printers.

POPULAR WITH EMPLOYERS.

Miss Mary Maple, who was one of the brides today in the double wedding at Chester, has been assistant bookkeeper in the office at the Cartwright for several years, and has endeared herself to her employers by her sweet disposition and efficient service. They will part with her with the deepest regret.

FEUSTEL-BEAVER.

Frank Feustel, a presser, and Miss Ada Beaver, of the warehouse at Thompsons, are to be married Thanksgiving day. They will leave for Pittsburg on the morning of that day where the ceremony will be performed. They have the best wishes of their many friends at the plant.

NOTES OF THE POTTERS.

James Combs, of the glost end at the Thompson, is reported among the sick today.

Miss Ola Poland, of Cartwright's, is attending the double wedding at Chester today.

George Bloor has accepted a position at the Thompson and is finishing cups for John McDole.

Leonard Beatty, who has been operating the plate and saucer jigger at the Thompson, is now on the spittoon jigger.

Glade Coleman, of the packing department at the Thompson, returned to work again yesterday after a week's layoff occasioned by an injured hand.

Miss Susan Wilson, and her mother-in-law, Mrs. Jennie Wilson, will leave in a few days for Reedsville, where they will make their future home. The former has resigned her position at the Thompson.

TILT OF COUNCILMEN ENLIVENS PROCEEDINGS AT CITY FATHERS' MEETING

had advocated illegal transactions.

"You, or the council let a contract to George Adam for street signs not long ago. The bids were opened, and a glaring irregularity was pointed out. This you called a technicality, and in spite of the efforts of Mr. Johnston and myself, no other explanation could be obtained. And there are other cases."

Still excited, Mr. Peach called upon the body to vindicate him, but Uncle Joe held to his point, and scored the Third ward member in plain and unmistakable language.

When the solicitor was called upon he gave as his opinion that inasmuch as no action for damages had been begun against the city, it would not be legal to voluntarily pay for the improvement, and it was dropped for the present.

Members Barlow, Bullock, Peach, Orr, Horwell, Nice and McConnell were present when the meeting was called to order, Thomas and Marshall arriving later. The builders' ordinance was the first matter up, and though everyone favored its passage, several members, with the mayor, thought it was not complete. The latter held there ought to be a clause placing a time limit in which the building under way should be completed. The ordinance was allowed to go on its second reading, and between now and the time it is up for final passage the clauses which are now lacking will be inserted.

The ordinance providing for money to pay for the improvement of Springdale street, was put on its second reading, and under suspension of the rules was finally passed.

Ravine street residents petitioned for a light on that thoroughfare and it was referred to the light committee.

Under the head of reports of committees it had been predicted that the railroad committee would enlighten the council and the public generally upon the plan mapped out by it in dealing with the Pennsylvania company, but strange to say, no report was forthcoming. It is known, however, that the committee had its work well in hand, and at the proper time the curious ones will be "put next."

President Nice desired a few reports from the committees appointed some time ago to look after the several departments of the city government. It developed that none of the committees had as yet got down to work. Mr. Nice urged that meetings be called at once and the task begun, as there were but a few weeks in which to complete it. The president recalled that two committees had been omitted, that of the sinking fund and the one to fix the salaries of the municipal offices. He did not fill these places, however, probably thinking it could be done at the next meeting.

The street committee had neglected to have constructed a pair of steps connecting Trentvale street and Edgewood addition. The work had been authorized several months ago, the lumber was on the ground, but no steps had been taken toward finishing up the work. Chairman Bullock, of the street committee, reported that his department had been given the impression that the work had been completed a long time ago.

An ordinance providing for the construction of a storm water sewer for 407 feet on Bradshaw avenue was brought up and read, but it was found that the work could not be started this fall, and the fact that the present conucil cannot make contracts to be carried out by bodies to be organized later, the measure killed itself.

The assessing ordinance for Trentvale street covering the collection of assessments upon that thoroughfare according to benefits, was placed on its final reading under suspension of the rules, and passed. Dr. Marshall supported the motion for a suspension of the rules, but voted against the adoption of the ordinance. Of the assessing ordinances on the three streets, Calcutta road, Trentvale street and Pennsylvania avenue, the two former have been passed. As soon as the equalizing board, now at work on Pennsylvania avenue, has finished its labors, it too, can be passed. The council will then be ready to adopt a bond issue proposition for the purpose of paying the city's share of the expense of improving these thoroughfares and will doubtless do so.

It was reported that Mrs. Ellen O'Connor, with a few other residents of Oblique street, were not satisfied with the grade which had been established there and wanted it changed. The engineer stated there had been an addition laid out since the street grade had been established, and that the owners of this plot had filled in the lots to a depth that did not correspond with the fixed grade. He did not see how the lines could be changed unless all the property owners on the street would petition council in the customary way.

A petition will be presented this week asking that an additional portion of Summit Lane be improved by paving. The city has now under way a section of the alley and provided the property owners waive all rights that alley, between Jackson and Jefferson, will be paved along with the rest.

On motion of McConnell the street commissioner was ordered to repair a flight of steps on Eighth street, near the Corns property.

Several pavements on the south side of Fifth street had been omitted from the list when the matter was taken up some time ago, and by motion the engineer was instructed to go ahead with the work of laying them at once.

It was the opinion of Engineer J. C. Kelly that the repairs could be made to Thomas Chadwick's property at a cost of $192.50, but no action was taken. Many of the members believe that it will cost the city much more than that amount if Mr. Chadwick decided to sue for damages. This mave is thought to be unevitable.

CURING CONSUMPTION.

When Scott's Emulsion makes the consumptive gain flesh it is curing his consumption.

Exactly what goes on inside to make the consumptive gain weight when taking Scott's Emulsion is still a mystery.

Scott's Emulsion does something to the lungs too that reduces the cough. More weight and less cough always mean that consumption is losing its influence over the system.

Scott's Emulsion is a reliable help.

Window Glass Manufacturers and Jobbers Settle on Terms.

Muncie, Ind., Nov. 26.—An agreement has been reached by the American Window Glass company, the Federation Window Glass company and the Independent Window Glass company on one side, and the American Window Glass Jobbers' association on the other, whereby the jobbers agree to take of the window glass combination not less than 450,000 boxes of glass each month for six months, price to remain the same for the first two months and to be increased slightly each month thereafter, until the term of the contract shall expire.

The amount of increase each month is to be determined by future agreements between the jobbers and manufacturing companies. This monthly sale will not take up all the product of the factories, but will leave a large surplus in the hands of the manufacturers. The three window glass companies control 3,109 pots, but shortage of workmen and fuel prevents the operation of part of this capacity.

REALM OF SPORTS

ROVERS VS. ROCHESTER

The Big Game of Thanksgiving Day Will Be Played at West End Park.

The West End Rovers, one of the fastest rugby foot ball teams in northeastern Ohio, will play the Rochester second team tomorrow afternoon in West End park. Not until last evening did Manager Ashbaugh know that the game would be played in the West End. He had been given to understand that the grounds were taken, but John Walsh, manager of the park, notified him that the first team will have no game.

The West End Rovers average in weight about 135 pounds, and for their size they put up a game well worth witnessing. It is the wish of the team to get games with all local teams who come in their class and have announced that they will play for $50 or $100 a side. They state that they are overwilling to meet the Oakland boys, but will not play for pleasure. Considering that there will be practically no other form of amusement afforded in the city tomorrow, it is expected that a large crowd will see Rochester and the Rovers take a tumble. The former team is not only a strong bunch, but it has an enviable record for the season, and the Rovers do not expect to win the game without putting forth every effort. Competent referees have been secured and the contest will be fought with vigor by both sides. The Rovers will lineup as follows:

Foot Ball Until January 1.

The season for association foot ball will be extended until at least the first of the year. The Rovers are preparing for quite a swing around the circuit where this sport thrives, and already have a prospect of four games, to be played during the week intervening between Christmas and New Year's. The exact dates have not been fixed, but the first game is to be played on Christmas day, probably with the McDonald team. They will visit Laurel Hill, Swissvale and Youngstown. The Rovers are confident of at least getting an even split on these games and hope to win a majority.

Music in Plenty.

There will be plenty of music for the Thanksgiving foot ball game in Salem when Salem will play Lisbon for the championship of the county. The services of the Quaker City band has already been secured. In addition to this the band of 20 pieces, which will be there on that day with the "Robinson Crusoe" show, will be on the field rooting for Salem. Lisbon will also have a band.

To Play With Yale.

The officials of the Yale baseball team have just completed their schedule for 1903, and in the list of games appears the name of the University of West Virginia. This game will be played at New Haven, May 13.

Newspaper Consolidation.

G. Ernest Koch, who has published the Columbiana Independent for some time, in the last issue of that paper states that it has been sold to Newell & Shingler, publishers of the Columbiana Leader. The purchaser will consolidate the two papers. Koch will remain in Columbiana and will conduct a job printing business exclusively.

Pale, Weak and Constantly Tired.

Dr. Miles' Heart Cure Cured Me.

"I write to thank you for the cure I received from your remedies. When I began taking your medicine I was confined to my bed most of the time. Our best home doctors told me there was no cure for me on account of the weak condition of my heart. I was pale and weak, constantly tired, had no appetite and could not sleep. I was exceedingly nervous and easily irritated in consequence. At last I began taking as a last resort, Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure together with Dr. Miles' Wine of Sarsaparilla. I was helped from the start and I cannot say enough in praise of these wonderful remedies. I can truthfully say they are the best medicines I ever took. They cured me and I am now able to work on the farm every day. I gladly recommend your remedies to all sufferers."—Wm. B. Campbell, Mantorville, Minn.

"For years I could not turn my head to the right but it caused great pain in the back of my neck and it seemed at times my head would burst with pain. I would sometimes lie down, and could not get up without help my neck was so stiff. About once a week I would have to go to bed with a very severe headache. By using one of Dr. Miles' Nerve Plasters on my neck and occasionally using the Anti-Pain Pills, which always relieved the headache instantly, I completely overcame my trouble, and both headache and stiffness have disappeared."—Miss Lucy Billows, Cleveland, Ohio.

THE INDIANS' THANKSGIVING

THE interest in Thanksgiving day and its observance is just as intense these days among the reservation Indians as in college towns where great football games are scheduled to occur, says the New York Times. Especially is this true in the southwest, where the Indians have had an opportunity to become thoroughly civilized of late years. The white people find no more enjoyment in this day of universal good cheer than do these same dusky redskins.

It is a day of feasting, playing and gambling, with a big dance at night. Such sport only comes once a year to them nowadays, when they have had to forsake the scalping knife for the plow. Their wild nature rebelled at the idea of work, and it has been with much difficulty that the government agents have made farmers out of the young braves. A day of rest and amusement is considered good for their better nature, and the government authorities are willing that Thanksgiving day shall become a festal time for the reservation wards of the nation.

The Kiowas and Comanches, who have but recently been placed on allotments, will have forsaken many of their wild plans of amusement this Thanksgiving, owing to the fact that they have been cut off the free list of beef issues. They have arranged to draw grass money on Thanksgiving, and a goodly portion of this will be spent in purchasing food for a grand feast. At night they will take part in a green corn dance, at which prayers will be offered to the Great Spirit for the good crops which they have had the past season. The spirit of thankfulness pervades the Indian celebrations.

The Osages hold a big feast at Pawhuska, their capital city. All members of the tribe are invited to take part in the festivities. At the beginning and end of each meal—and there are many—the aged missionary who lives among them is invited to deliver a short prayer thanking the Great Spirit for the good things which the agent has sent to them. The food is cooked by the squaws, and, while it could be prepared in a much cleaner and more tasteful manner, the cooking is an improvement over that of a few years gone.

The Apaches and Cheyennes are in the habit of holding a pony smoke. Often the Osages indulge in this expensive festival. A pony smoke is a friendly meeting of two tribes and is especially appropriate for the occasion. The tribe giving the smoke is supposed to bear all of the expenses. They provide the best game and vegetables in the market for their guests, and at the end of the first day's meeting they present a good pony to the head of each family visiting them. As a tribe consists of from 300 to 500 families, the expenses soon mount high. The Osages, being the richest reservation Indians there are today, can better afford to hold pony smokes, and, combined with their feast day, they generally invite several hundred guests from the Poncas, Tonkawas and surrounding tribes. Those accepting the ponies are supposed to return the gift with equally expensive ones later on, but few of them can do so.

The Poncas hold every Thanksgiving as a beef issue day. If the agent does not come forward and present them with a herd of cattle for this occasion, they mortgage their property and buy cattle of some neighboring ranchmen. A beef issue is the most typical of the redskin and also the most picturesque of Indian Thanksgiving celebrations. For years the government has forbidden the issue of beef after the manner of an old time issue, but on special occasions they are allowed the amusement of killing their own meat. It is said by the government officers who succeeded in having the practice stopped that beef issue tends to make the Indian wilder and more difficult to civilize.

A hundred cattle are turned loose in a large pasture. The young men of the tribe are mounted on mustangs and have shining field guns. With the good wishes of the squaws and medicine men ringing in their ears they ride out to kill the cattle. The beasts have no chance for life whatever. The chase is accompanied by an undue amount of wild yelling, while excitement grows intense in the camp. The smell of fresh blood makes the squaws wild, as it were. After all of the cattle have been shot down then the killers give a signal which means that all of the tribe are at liberty to rush forth and secure their portion. A half beef is awarded to each squaw. The beef is cleaned and cooked on a fire on the open plain, while the medicine men dance their approval and the warriors sing in their glee. The feast follows, with more dancing, and the whole day is thus spent, ending late at night with a final gorge.

THANKSGIVING PROCLAMATIONS

Carefully preserved in the state department at Washington are all of the proclamations ever issued by the presidents of the United States. They are kept in large brown envelopes and carefully filed away in series for each year. Among them are the Thanksgiving proclamations issued by our presidents and include one dated Jan. 1, 1795, and signed by George Washington, while another bears the signature of James Madison.

The issuing of a Thanksgiving proclamation by the president of the United States is a more complicated affair than most people imagine. It is a serious duty for the president, for it is customary for him to write this proclamation with his own hand and to put into it as much of the spirit of the day as possible. President Harrison used to take a pencil and a little pad of paper and write out the proclamation in full. Then he would turn it over to one of the executive clerks to be copied. Mr. Harrison preferred to use his pencil rather than to dictate. President Cleveland also wrote some things with his own hand, but he used a stenographer, too, a great deal.

The president in writing a Thanksgiving proclamation makes a draft of what he wishes to say. Such a high official as he is cannot afford the time to make pretty copies of his letters. He simply scrawls what he thinks ought to be said, with corrections and amendments here and there, and after the wording has satisfied him he hands it over to a clerk to be copied in proper shape. In the state department there are two or three clerks who make a specialty of penmanship, and one of these engrosses the proclamation on parchment artistically, when it is sent back to the White House to receive the president's signature. Then the great seal of the state department is affixed. It is a very ornate seal. It ought to be, for it cost $1,000. It is kept in a rosewood case.

The affixing of this seal is a momentous affair. A warrant for it must have been previously obtained from and signed by the president. The proclamation having been made entirely formal and authentic by the addition of the seal, copies are taken of it by clerks, and one is sent to each of the states and territories, addressed to the governors.

The state department uses the typewriter for some purposes, but not for official correspondence. All of the copies of the proclamation are written out on the long sheets of blue paper which are used for official correspondence. Each governor who receives a copy of the president's proclamation will make a proclamation of his own. But in the meantime the proclamation of the president has been made public, and the people all over the country know what day has been chosen for Thanksgiving.

SPOILED HIS DINNER.

An Unpleasant Thanksgiving Day For a Politician.

"Bluest Thanksgiving I ever spent?" mused the fine old gentleman who has an unconquerable antipathy to practical politics. "It stands out in my memory like an obelisk on a plain, and it was not so very long ago, either.

"I had been induced that fall to run for an important public office. It was done against my better judgment and under great pressure, but when a man enters such a fight he wants to win. I was in a close district and determined to put up the very best fight that the circumstances would permit. I advertised at once for an extra stenographer, and from the many who responded selected a beautiful, bright and dashing young woman who justified my immediate faith in her ability. She did all my private correspondence, knew as much about the inside of the campaign as I did, worked day and night with a willingness that was surprising, and even took from one of my shrewdest advisers the list of voters in the strongest section with which I had to contend, with full instructions as to how the most influential persons among them could be won to my cause. It was great work, and yet I fell several hundred short of the normal party vote.

"My successful opponent lived in a neighboring town and graciously invited me to be his guest on the following Thanksgiving. It would have looked surly to refuse, and I went. It was really an admirable social function, but the few hours I put in there were torture. The host met me with a hearty handclasp. Turning, he said, 'My wife.' Resplendent in satin and jewels, I saw my stenographer. 'Love and war,' she murmured. 'He thinks I was visiting my old home in New England.' I held my peace, but that fatted turkey tasted like cork."—Detroit Free Press.

THE FIRST THANKSGIVING.

A Cotemporary Account of the Pioneer Feast In 1621.

The first Thanksgiving day was celebrated in the autumn of 1621.

An account of the pioneer of all these feasts has been presented in a letter by Edward Winslow written in the same year:

"You shall understand that in this little time that few of us have been here we have built seven dwelling houses and four for the use of the plantation and have made preparations for eleven others. We set the last spring some twenty acres of corn and sowed some six acres of barley and peas. Our corn did prove well, God be praised, and our barley indifferent good, but our peas not worth harvesting. Our harvest being got in, our governor sent four men out fowling, so that we might after a special manner rejoice together after we had gathered the fruit of our labors. They four in one day killed as much fowl as, with a little help beside, served the whole company almost a week, at which time among other recreations we exercised our arms, many of the Indians arriving among us, and among the rest their greatest king, Massasoit, with ninety men, whom for three days we entertained and feasted. And, although it be not always so plentiful as it was at this time with us, yet, by the goodness of God, we are so far from want that we often wish you partakers of our plenty."

Thus Thanksgiving was born.

It continued to be celebrated, though not with any regularity, for about sixty years, after which it was annually ordered by the general court, not always in November, but generally after the harvests were gathered.

An Ideal Woman's Medicine.

So says Mrs. Josie Irwin, of 325 So. College St., Nashville, Tenn., of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Never in the history of medicine has the demand for one particular remedy for female diseases equalled that attained by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and never during the lifetime of this wonderful medicine has the demand for it been so great as it is to-day.

From the Atlantic to the Pacific, and throughout the length and breadth of this great continent come the glad tidings of woman's sufferings relieved by it, and thousands upon thousands of letters are pouring in from grateful women saying that it will and positively does cure the worst forms of female complaints.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all women who are puzzled about their health to write her at Lynn, Mass., for advice. Such correspondence is seen by women only, and no charge is made.

THE GORE TRAGEDY.

American Doctors Tend Individually to Accident Theory.

Paris, Nov. 26.—In spite of the rigid secrecy which has been maintained by the officials and by the commission of American doctors concerning the result of the autopsy conducted by the latter on the body of Mrs. Ellen Gore, it is learned from an authoritative source that the doctors tend individually to the acceptance of the theory of an accident, and the probabilities are that their official report will strongly incline to that theory, if it does not positively assert it, thus bringing the French and American doctors into agreement and relieving the case of any international significance.

Consul General Gowdy continues to take the depositions of all witnesses. The Temps last night said that it was the activity displayed by the Russian colony on behalf of De Rydewski which stimulated the American officials into a counter activity on behalf of the late Mrs. Gore.

Farm Boiler Exploded.

Lebanon, Pa., Nov. 26.—A steam boiler on one of the dairy farms of G. Dawson Coleman, near here, exploded yesterday. The barn was set on fire and destroyed. Abraham Becker and Adam Ryle were badly burned. The live stock was saved.

Down in Health and Strength—Nervous—Irritable—Ache All Over—A Depressed Condition Rapidly Changed.

Mr. B. L. Updegraff, of No. 169 Fifth street, East Liverpool, Ohio, says:—"As a general and nerve tonic I can recommend Dr. Chase's Nerve Pills I got at Larkins' Drug Store. I was at the time feeling run down and nervous—not up to the mark in health and needed a tonic. The medicine did its work nicely and I regained tone, strength and energy again."

THE NEW YORK STOCK MARKET.

Trading Moderately Light and Chiefly Professional—Bonds Heavy in Sympathy With Stocks.

New York, Nov. 26.—Trading, while not especially light, was chiefly professional. Many traders showed a disposition to keep out of the market pending the publication of President Roosevelt's annual message, in which important recommendations regarding trust and tariff legislation are looked for.

Foreign exchange advanced to the highest point yet reached in the present upward movement. Demand bills sold up to 487.40. The price soon declined 10 points, however, at which level most of the day's business was done.

Declines were general at the opening, New York Central, St. Paul, Union Pacific, Reading, Sugar and other active issues selling off more or less extensively. Heavy purchases of Reading around 61 attracted attention, but that stock was among the principal sufferers in the selling movement at the close. There were unimportant recoveries and the tone of the market at the close was steady. London traded in about 12,000 shares, half purchases and half sales.

Bonds showed heaviness in sympathy with stocks and Wabash debenture Bs developed exceptional weakness. Total sales, par value, $1,955,000.

United States 3s, coupon, advanced ½ per cent on the last call.

STEAMER QUITO ASHORE.

No Lives Lost, but the Boat Is a Total Wreck.

Lorain, O., Nov. 26.—The steamer Quito, ore laden, from Escanaba to Cleveland, ran ashore while trying to make this port at 7 o'clock last night. A northeast gale prevailed at the time. The captain and 12 of the crew and the steward were rescued. Two engineers and two mates were left in the engine room. A boat sent to their rescue afterwards was able to get off but one of the mates, the other three remaining aboard, waiting for assistance which was sent from the Cleveland life saving station. The boat sprung a leak yesterday during the heavy wind, hence the endeavor to reach this port instead of going on to Cleveland.

At midnight the remaining three members of the boat's crew were taken off by the Cleveland life saving crew. The boat is pounding on the beach.

Mull's Grape Tonic Cures Constipation.

When the bowels move irregularly the entire bodily system must suffer. Constipation more frequently occurs among women and it manifests itself in provoking profuse leucorrhea and other serious female diseases. Regular bowels will result in a complete cure when you use Mull's Grape Tonic. Unlike pills and ordinary cathartics, this remedy is a mild, gentle laxative in addition to being a greater flesh-builder, blood-maker and strength-giver than cod liver oil or any other preparation recommended for that purpose. Mull's Grape Tonic will permanently cure the most obstinate case of constipation, and the numerous afflictions that invariably follow in its wake. No matter if it is piles, liver complaint, kidney disorder, vertigo, palpitation of the heart, diarrhea or the self-poisoning which follows when the undigested food remains in the bowels where it putrefies and empties highly diseased germs into the blood, such as typhoid and malaria, Mull's Grape Tonic will positively cure. Large sample bottle will be sent free to any address on receipt of 10 cents to cover postage, by the Lightning Medicine Co., Rock Island, Ill. Send name of your druggist. RETURNS AS ONE FROM THE DEAD

John Meade Was Thought to Be Resting in a Grave at Wheeling.

MANGLED BODY WAS FOUND

And Identified As His—Now He Turns Up In Jail In Newport, Ky., And Relatives Will Have Him Released Promptly.

Concerning John Meade, whose case was exclusively reported in the News Review on Monday, a Cincinnati dispatch says:

John Meade, who was arrested two weeks ago under the name of John Montgomery by the Newport police, has been mourned as dead for four years by his relatives, who reside in Wheeling, W. Va. That truth is stranger than fiction is again exemplified in the story of the "resurrection" of Meade, a scion of a prominent West Virginia family. His father, Colonel C. A. Meade, who died about a year ago, was mine inspector under Governor Atkinson and a well known politician.

His son John ran away from home five years ago, owing to some difficulty he had with his parents. Nothing more was heard from him until a year later, when a man answering his description was killed in a railroad wreck outside of Wheeling. The body was cut to pieces, but as the remains bore certain striking resemblances to John Meade, and the family was notified. Meade, Sr., identified the remains as those of his son and they were buried in the family vault.

About two weeks ago two young men were arrested by the Newport police. One of them, who gave the name of Shannon, was caught in the act of touching Motorman Kruse, of the C. N. & C. Street railway. The other man gave the name of John Montgomery. Both were tried for disorderly conduct and fined $25 and costs and sentenced to 10 days in jail. Having no money, they were remanded to the Newport jail to serve out the fine and sentence.

Montgomery, after languishing a few days, asked of Jailer Ploeger some paper, stating that he desired to write a letter to his relatives in Wheeling. He was given the paper and other writing materials and he indicted a letter to his brother asking him to send him $10.

Early yesterday morning Sergeant Gastreich, of the Newport police, was summoned to answer a telephone call from Wheeling, W. Va. The gentleman at the other end of the wire asked the sergeant if there was any one in the jail by the name of Meade or Montgomery.

He was told of the Montgomery case, and the young man was taken out of the cell and brought to the 'phone. The two began a conversation, and it was but a few minutes until the man at the other end recognized his brother, who was supposed to have been dead for four years.

The brother made arrangements to come to Newport, and will arrive today to pay the unexpired fine and take his brother home, where he will be received with open arms by a loving mother and five sisters.

Cleveland Accepts Invitation.

Philadelphia, Nov. 26.—Former President Grover Cleveland has accepted an invitation to preside at a public meeting to be held here on Dec. 11 in the interests of the Berean manual training and industrial school for colored people. Mr. Cleveland will make an address. Among the other speakers will be former Postmaster General Charles Emory Smith, Colonel A. K. McClure and Booker T. Washington.

Philadelphian Society.

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 26.—The Philadelphian society will hold commemorative exercises here on Dec. 6, to celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary of the formation of the American and Canadian Student Young Men's Christian association movement, which originated in Princeton in 1877. Representatives from nearly all of the student associations in the United States and Canada will be present.

Non-Union Barber Shot.

Wellston, O., Nov. 26.—Adam McClung, an old resident barber of Wellston, lies at the hospital at the point of death as the result of three bullet wounds inflicted by David Wills, secretary of the Jackson County Barbers' union. The trouble arose in Kuebler's barber shop. McClung is not a member of the union and had been employed there during the week.

It leads—the News Review.

There is praise among the people, there is song in burg and town,
For another year of plenty, pride and honor and renown;
And it's time the eery eagle
That we happened to inveigle
For a banner bird should fold his wings and pray.
But he can't. I'll tell you why—
In an hour he has to die,
For the eagle is a turkey today.

There are days of bitter battle, days of pride in deed and man,
When we love to hear the eagle scream as loudly as he can;
When the eagle of the mountain
And his mold on tomb and fountain
Have a chance to flap their wings and have their say.
But the emblem and the power
Are abolished for an hour,
For the eagle is a turkey today.

Where he wore a feather collar he has donned a fringe of dye,
And a pink and purple wattle droops across his eagle eye;
And his heaven reaching pinions
Trail the ground among the minions
Of the barnyard and the coop and country way,
While he bids his friends goodby
Ere he lays him down to die,
For the eagle is a turkey today.

Oh, I would not dim or tarnish aught of glory I have heard
Of our good old Uncle Sammy or the glory of his bird;
But when block and ax inveigle
To decapitate the eagle
Then I wonder why we let them have their way,
Till I learn the reason why—
Once a year the bird must die,
For the eagle is a turkey that day.

NEW CITY HALL NOW TALKED OF

A Matter That Will Doubtless Be Brought to New Safety Board's Attention.

The board of public safety, after completing the work absolutely necessary for the running of the city's affairs, will no doubt be swamped with requests and suggestions by people who have fed on hope for years and who will feel that the time has arrived for action or consideration in their case.

For several months after entering upon their duties the board will experience a time not to be envied. Protests which have been hanging fire for years will be in evidence, and all that the board will be able to do will be to promise action at an early date. Among the numerous requests that will be made of the honorable body, one in particular is being talked of at the present time.

Every resident of the city who has ever had occasion to transact business of any kind at the city hall knows without being told that East Liverpool is and has been for years badly in need of a more complete building. It is said that there is not a city of its size in the state that is not provided with a larger city building, better equipped and in every way more satisfactory. And it is an undisputed fact that there are many cities in the state less than half as large that have city halls which would be a credit to this municipality.

Although it is assured that the board will sooner or later be called upon to have the desired building erected, it is probable that it will be approached gently, in consideration of the fact that the board may look upon the question as one too stupenduous for immediate action. The first step toward its erection, if the board honors the request, will be to have built adjacent to the present hall, a vault that can be utilized by all of the city officials in storing for protection the valuables in their possession.

Were a fire to rage in the building at the present time the city would undoubtedly lose several thousand dollars worth of documents. In the city engineer's office there are plans and specifications of value impossible to estimate; in the city clerk's office records invaluable lie and in the mayor's office dockets covering crimes for years back. In the three offices the paraphernalia is simply under lock and key, which practically means that nothing is protected. Mayor Davidson said yesterday that something must be done and speedily if it be the desire of the board to have the city's property under protection.

MISS FAY LEE,

Miss Fay Lee.

"Your booklet came to my home like a message of health when I had suffered with headache, backache and bearing-down pains. I was weak, nervous and hysterical and had not consulted any doctor, thinking it would pass away in time, but instead I found that the pains increased and were more frequent. I decided to try Wine of Cardui and in a short time was much improved. It seemed to act like a charm. I kept up the treatment and the result was most satisfactory. Words fail to express my gratitude for the suffering that is now saved me. I am in fine health, physically and mentally. I can only say 'thank you', but there is much more in my heart for you."

BEARING-DOWN pains are the worst that women know. If you are suffering from this trouble you need not be uncertain about it. The pains in the abdomen and back that feel as if heavy weights were pulling down on the nerves of the stomach are "bearing-down pains". They may not be particularly severe at present but they are growing worse. That headache which nearly drives you distracted now is caused by the terrible nervous tension. The nerves soon begin to give way under the strain. You perhaps jump at any unusual disturbance, or laugh or weep, hysterically, at no apparent cause. That is what Miss Fay Lee, 603½ North Seventh Street, Kansas City, Kansas, was coming to when she rescued herself by taking Wine of Cardui. The Wine made her a strong, healthy woman again, as it has made a million other women strong and healthy. By inducing regular menstruation the entire system is relieved of the terrible wasting drains. The ligaments which hold the womb in place are strengthened by a healthy flow and that organ is returned to its normal position. Returning health is the result. This is what Wine of Cardui has done for thousands of the best women in America.

If you need advice write The Ladies' Advisory Department, The Chattanooga Medicine Company, Chattanooga, Tenn., describing all your symptoms freely, and a letter of advice will be sent you. Secure a $1.00 bottle of Wine of Cardui from your druggist to-day.

A THANKFUL THANKSGIVING

"I DON'T feel as if I should enjoy this Thanksgivin'," said Mrs. Joel Nisbett, looking down into the basket of glossy, red cheeked Spitzenbergs as if it were a family vault and taking up an apple as if it had been a skull; "no, I don't."

"Then, Sarepta," observed her husband, who had just thrown a huge log on the open fire, "you don't disarn nothin' to be thankful for! It's as harnsome a turkey as ever flapped, and I don't know of a year when I've had nicer pumpkins on that ar' corn lot!"

"'Tain't turkey or pumpkin pies or cranberry sass as makes Thanksgivin'," signed Mrs. Nisbett.

"What is it, then? Ef it's cold weather, I should ha' thought the last frost would ha' done the business for you pretty fairly. Them artemisias by the front door is scorched black, and the old maple is losin' its leaves as if they

"I AM GOING TO BE MARRIED."

was rainin' down. Parson Jarvis is comin' all the way from Sloatesville to preach tomorrow, and the quire's larned a bran' new anthem just a-purpose, about bein' thankful for harvest and all that sort of thing. I'm sure I don't know what else you'd have."

Mrs. Nisbett only answered by a sigh.

"I wonder if 'tain't possible Stephe 'll be hum tonight," she said after a pause.

"He writ not. He thought he'd drop in arly tomorrow mornin' if he caught the train he expected. Only think, old woman; it's five years since Stephe was hum to Thanksgivin'!"

Old Nisbett rubbed his horny hands, with a chuckle, adding:

"And I s'pose, if all accounts is true, he's gettin' to be a great man out in that western country. It was kind of a hard pull when he went off and left us, but maybe the boy was in the right."

"Yes," said Mrs. Nisbett dolorously, "but somehow I can't get reconciled to the idea of his marryin' a strange gal out there."

Joel scratched his head. This was a phase of the subject that he scarcely felt competent to discuss.

"Maybe you'll like her. Stephen says she's a nice gal."

"Stephen says! As if a man over head and ears in love wouldn't say anything."

"I wish he'd told us who she was."

Mrs. Nisbett groaned again. Joel went out to the woodpile, the everyday shrine whence he generally derived what little of philosophic inspiration he had.

"Mrs. Nisbett!"

It was a soft little voice, and the old lady's face relaxed instinctively as it sounded on her ears.

"Why, Lida Tremaine—'tain't you!"

"It is. I've done everything that Aunt Constance wanted, and now I've just run over to see if you don't need a bit of help."

She stood in the doorway, a fair little apparition, all flushed and rosy with the November wind, while her blue eyes sparkled as if they were twin sapphires hidden away under her long, dark lashes. She was neither blond nor brunette, but a fresh cheeked girl, with nut brown hair, skin like the leaf of a damask rose, a straight, refined nose and lips as ripe as a red crabapple, though by no means so sour. Generally she had a demure sort of gravity lingering about her face, but when she did laugh a dimple came out upon her cheek and a row of pearly teeth glimmered instantaneously.

In one hand she carried a bunch of late autumn flowers.

"See!" she cried, holding them up. "I ransacked Aunt Constance's garden for these. I knew that big vase on the mantel needed something, and, with a branch or so of scarlet leaves, I'll have a royal bouquet to help you keep Thanksgiving."

Mrs. Nisbett took the fair oval face between her two hands and kissed the fresh little mouth.

"Set down, Lida," she said. "I wasn't a-calculatin' to have no sech fixin's up, but you've sech a way, child, I can't never say no to you."

"But you're going to keep Thanksgiving," cried Lida, throwing off her outer wrappings and dancing up to the looking glass like a little gale of wind, "because you invited Aunt Constance and me to dinner and because your son is coming home."

"Yes, child, yes," said Mrs. Nisbett, subsiding once more into the mournful key from which Lida's sudden appearance had momentarily aroused her. "Joel's got the turkey shut up in a coop, and the bakin' 's done, and I'm just a-fixin' them apples, and"—

"Oh, oh," cried Lida, who had fluttered to the window, "what glorious red leaves speckled over with little drops of gold! May I make some wreaths for the wall? Oh, please say yes!"

Mrs. Nisbett said "yes"—it would have been hard work to say "no" to Lida—and the girl soon came in, her apron full of the sprigs of the old maple tree, whose shadowy boughs kept the window veiled with cool shadows through the glaring summer days and showered fading gold upon the dead grass when the autumn came.

Mrs. Nisbett looked with tenderness upon the graceful little figure seated on the hearth rug, when the shine of the high heaped logs lost itself in her bright hair and made sparkles in her eyes, as the wreaths and trails of autumn leaves grew rapidly beneath her deft fingers.

"Lida," she said softly, "Lida, my dear!" Lida looked up.

"I saw your Aunt Constance yesterday, but there's somethin' reserved about her, and I didn't like to ask about you—whether you had decided to go out as a governess or not; because, my dear, Joel and I were talkin' last night, and we both thought what a comfort it would be to have you here."

"To have me here?"

"We're old and we're alone, and somehow we've both took a fancy to you, my child. So when your Aunt Constance goes back to the city, if you choose to come here"—

Mrs. Nisbett paused abruptly and burst into tears.

"We had a little girl once, my dear, and if she'd lived she would ha' been nigh about your age."

Lida let the leaves drop down on the floor as she sprang up and threw both arms round the old woman's neck.

"Oh, Mrs. Nisbett," she whispered softly, "you are so very, very kind. Believe me, I appreciate it all, but—but—I hardly know how to tell you."

Mrs. Nisbett listened intently. Lida smiled and cried a little and then whispered so low it was scarcely audible.

"I am going to be married."

"Married!" ejaculated Mrs. Nisbett, with all a woman's interest in this important piece of information. "And who to?"

"Your son lives in Iowa—in Parlington?"

"Yes."

"Well, did he ever mention the name of"—

Lida paused, her cheeks glowing roses. Old Nisbett had come in with an armful of wood, bringing a gale with him from the frosty outer world.

"I'll tell you by and by," whispered Lida as she went back to her work.

"Joel 'll go out again arter awhile," thought Mrs. Nisbett, "and then I'll hear about Lida's beau."

But Joel sat down before the fire with a complacent satisfaction which boded ill for the gratification of his wife's curiosity, and finally accompanied Lida home, thus frustrating all his wife's designs and cutting off her chance of hearing Lida's story.

"Dear me!" thought she. "I don't believe the man was ever born who knowed when he wasn't wanted! How lonesome it seems when Lida's gone! What does the girl want to get married for when I could ha' took such a sight o' comfort with her? Oh, dear, dear! It does seem as if the world was all askew!"

The next day, in spite of the weather prophet's prediction of snow, dawned clear and brilliant as the dying smile of Indian summer. By 11 o'clock Mrs. Nisbett was dressed in her best silk and cap, with the turkey browning beautifully in the oven and the cranberry tarts doing credit to themselves as well as to their maker, the table set, the fire high heaped with crackling logs and the plates dressed with coronals of autumn leaves. Aunt Constance, a tall, prim maiden lady of uncertain age, stood before the bedroom looking glass arranging her coiffure. Lida, in a blue dress with a late autumn rose in her hair, was tripping hither and thither as light footed and helpful as half a dozen household fairies merged into one, while Mrs. Nisbett stood regarding her with a loving eye, murmuring to herself:

"Well, well, it seems like it was the Lord's will to deny us of just what we most want, but if I had a daughter I could wish she was like Lida."

As the old kitchen clock struck 1 Mrs. Nisbett, looking from the window, gave a little cry.

"There he comes—there comes Joel, and, as I live, there's the boy with him!"

Lida ran into the bedroom.

When she returned, Mrs. Nisbett was clasped in the arms of a tall, handsome man of four or five and twenty.

"Lida," said the proud matron, striving to disengage herself from the affectionate clasp, "this is my son Stephen, and—why, what's the matter?"

For Stephen had dropped her hands with an exclamation of surprise and amazement, and Lida stood there glowing crimson.

"Lida! Why, mother, this is a surprise indeed that you have prepared for me!"

"I prepared!" echoed the astonished old lady. "Well, that's a good un, when I'm ten times as much surprised as you be! Lida, what does this mean?"

"It means," said Lida, with a demure smile—she was beginning to recover her scattered self possession—"it means that this is the gentleman I am to be married to!"

"Stephen!" cried Mrs. Nisbett, "is Lida to be your wife?"

"She has given me her promise to that effect, at least," said Stephen, looking proudly down upon his lovely little fiancee.

"Well, if it don't beat all how queer things do happen!" said Mrs. Nisbett, her face radiant. "And you've been livin' neighbor to me these six weeks and I never knowed it. Lida, why didn't you tell me?"

"Because I never dreamed that Stephen Risingham, my betrothed western lover, was anything to Mrs. Nisbett," said Lida, laughing.

"There 'tis, now!" ejaculated the farmer. "How was she to know that he was only my nephew, adopted when his parents died, twenty good years ago. We've always called him son, and he's always been a son to us. But Lida didn't know. Old woman, what do you say to Stephen's wife?"

Mrs. Nisbett clasped Lida to her heart.

"I do say," she ejaculated, "this is the thankfullest Thanksgivin' I ever lived to see!"—New York Daily News.

"THE THANKSGIVING day ten or twelve years ago," said a tanned and frozen Sandy Hook pilot, "was altogether the most exciting twenty-four hours of my life, though it promised to be dull enough in the morning. It was before the New York pilots had combined with us and built the steam pilotboat New York, and we used to cruise about for vessels in small schooners.

"Such a cruise in a pilotboat would be tiresome to any one at any time; just then it was doubly so to me. For a couple of years I had been mightily interested in a good looking young woman. So far as I could see, the interest was mutual, and I had long had in mind suggesting to her a voyage on the sea of matrimony, with myself as pilot. I hadn't done it before because the girl's parents didn't seem to take kindly to a seafaring son-in-law. They allowed me to call upon their daughter once in awhile, but the air about the house when I was there made me think of storms till one evening early in November, just before I went out on this cruise. That evening, to my surprise, the mother invited me to eat Thanksgiving dinner with the family.

"There was a look in the girl's eyes that made me take courage when the mother gave the invitation, and I determined to settle the whole question on Thanksgiving day. The moral certainty of settling it the way I wished made me so happy at the beginning of the cruise that my pilot mates all noticed it. Our boat carried seven pilots, and I was fifth on the list, but I never dreamed there would be any trouble getting a ship in time to be ashore for Thanksgiving dinner.

He said he was going to furnish green turtle soup.

"We had bad luck from the beginning. On the second day out there was a big blow, and we had to run before the wind to save ourselves. It was three or four days, and we were 400 miles offshore at least, away out of the track of incoming vessels, before we dared put about. It was a full week before we were in position to look for ships, and even then we remained unlucky. There were plenty of ships coming in, but somehow they had nearly all picked up pilots before we sighted them. At the end of the second week only two of our men had left us. I was then third on the list, but I didn't worry as yet. By the day before Thanksgiving I was as sour as a spoiled pudding, and I couldn't crack a smile to save me. That afternoon two more of my mates got ships, so that I was next man to go, but as we were quite 200 miles out there wasn't a ghost of a show for me to get ashore in time for the dinner, even if I got a vessel early the next morning.

"Curiously enough, I felt a little better after I knew that I couldn't keep my engagement, and I began to take a lively interest in the steward's preparations for a Thanksgiving dinner at sea. He was a good cook and always prided himself on giving us something extra on holidays. This time he said he was going to furnish real green turtle soup to begin with and all the genuine Thanksgiving fixtures to follow.

"But just after midnight on Thanksgiving morning the sea suddenly stirred itself up rather worse than I have ever seen it before or since. In fact, our boat pitched so badly that we all awoke and couldn't go to sleep again.

"'Sail ahead! Full rigged ship on the weather bow!'

"That was my chance. I'd have preferred a steamer to a sailing vessel, of course, for there was no telling how long it would require to take a windjammer in. The signals showed that a pilot was wanted, and the crew made ready to put a small boat overboard.

"Just as the oarsmen were carefully working up toward the big vessel so that I could grasp the swinging ladder and climb on board a big wave came along and dashed the boat against the ship's side. In an instant the boat was crushed like an eggshell and we were all in the water. I thought I was going straight to Davy Jones, and I swallowed about a barrel of brine. Suddenly I came to the surface. A line had been thrown and was just in front of me. I grasped it and was hauled aboard more dead than alive.

"I took the ship in all right in spite of my mishap, and when I got to New York found the girl's father waiting at the pilots' office for news of me. Then I knew what the answer to my delayed question would be. It hadn't been a bad Thanksgiving after all."

BILL'S THANKSGIVING DINNER

He was called "Bill the Eater" in the east, in the west was known as "the man with the appetite," and the north and south agreed that "Hungry Bill" was a name that fitted him down to the ground. Bill cared very little, however, what he was called so long as he got a call to dinner occasionally. On his tramps through the country he had eaten at many a farmer's table, but on only one occasion had his appetite been satisfied. As he was sitting down to the table with a family one day the house took fire, and there was a rush for outdoors—that is, all fled except Bill. It was the opportunity of his life. He realized it, and when he was carried from the burning building an hour later half suffocated and with hair and whiskers burned off he had no complaint to make. For once in his life he had eaten what he called a square meal.

As a rule Bill avoided the large cities, but he always made it a point to be in one of them on Thanksgiving in order to take advantage of the free dinners usually provided for the poor. Year before last he ate his turkey in Boston, but last year he decided to feast in New York. Bill was seated in City Hall park when Charity came along and invited him to a free Thanksgiving dinner, and he was fit and ready to eat the meal of his life. He did not accept the invitation with undue haste, however, and thus give himself away. He permitted himself to be urged a little and conveyed the impression that one helping would fill him up and send him away to make room for another.

It was 1 o'clock in the afternoon when the festive board and the unfestive Bill squared off at each other. If Charity expected him to rush things, then Charity was disappointed. He had all the time there was, and he was aware that Thanksgiving only comes once a year. When urged to eat all he wanted, he replied that he would pick a bone or two, thank you, and merely toyed with the food before him. At 2 o'clock, however, Bill was still there, and as he began to strike his gait there were some whispered remarks about the danger of overeating. At 3 o'clock the tramp had taken the edge off his appetite, and at 4 he was eating in earnest.

Then a mild attempt was made to choke him off or to get him to choke himself to death, but Bill had decided to have some dinner. At 5 o'clock it was necessary to close the hall. The idea was to close Bill and the hall simultaneously, but he said he had dropped in to get a mouthful to eat, and they gave him half an hour's grace. He wanted more, but the committee was firm, even drawing him away from the board and escorting him to the door. Then, as Bill looked back with longing eyes at a mince pie he had been obliged to leave behind, he sighed and observed:

"I was told that this was to be a Thanksgiving spread to make us all thankful. I was given to understand there would be something to eat and drink and that no one would be turned away hungry. It is needless to say that I believe you acted from proper motives, but you can see for yourselves that you have made a sad failure of it. I will now walk up Fifth avenue and try to beg enough food to keep me from starving. Good day to you! I'll see you again next Thanksgiving."

"Not if I see you first!" replied Charity when she could get her breath.

THE PRESIDENT

Of the City Council, Wilkesbarre, Pa., Cured of Rheumatism.

Col. Wm. J. Harvey, a president of Wilkesbarre's city council, who will long be remembered for his great work for the city, was once a mere physical wreck, torn in every muscle and nerve from the frightful pains caused by rheumatism. He consulted the best physicians, went abroad, took mud baths, and almost every known treatment for the disease. A friend had had a very similar experience and Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy had cured him, so he recommended this great kidney medicine to Col. Harvey and he is to-day a well man, hale and hearty. He writes straight to the point:

DR. DAVID KENNEDY,

Dear Sir:—This is to certify that I was permanently cured of rheumatism by the use of Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy.

WM. J. HARVEY.

Rheumatism is but another name for uric acid poisoning which is caused primarily by diseased kidneys. Cure your kidneys and the rheumatism disappears.

For all diseases of the kidneys, liver, bladder and blood, rheumatism, dyspepsia and chronic constipation, as well as sicknesses peculiar to women, Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy is unquestionably the greatest medicine known to the medical profession.

DECISION CREATES SURPRISE.

Coal Strike Troubles Will Now Go Back to Commission for Settlement. Arbitrators Will Resume Hearing of the Case Next Tuesday.

Washington, Nov. 26.—All prospects for an understanding between the United Mine Workers and the coal operators, outside the anthracite coal strike commission, came to a sudden termination late yesterday afternoon, through the receipt of a dispatch to Mr. Wayne MacVeagh, representing the Pennsylvania Coal company and the Hillside Coal and Iron company, notifying him that at a meeting of the anthracite coal road men in New York yesterday it had been decided not to grant an interview to Mr. Mitchell and his associates, which had been suggested for Friday next. The announcement, coming as it did after an all-day conference in this city between Mr. MacVeagh and Mr. Mitchell and his associates, attended part of the time by Carroll D. Wright, in an endeavor to adjust some details of the proposed agreement between the operators and miners, completely surprised everyone here. From a reliable source it is learned that the proposition that the operators meet Mr. Mitchell on Friday next was made at the instance of Mr. MacVeagh, who was no less surprised than Mr. Mitchell himself at the turn affairs took yesterday. From statements made by Mr. Darrow early in the day the impression had spread that a complete agreement would be effected at yesterday's conference, but when the meeting broke up Mr. Darrow read to the newspaper men in the corridor outside his room in Willard's hotel a statement which made it clear that no final agreement had been reached and that no further conferences were likely. The statement was as follows:

"The conference today was simply a continuation of the conferences held at Scranton and with precisely the same object—that of trying to reach a basis of hopeful discussion for an amicable settlement. Mr. MacVeagh has not been in Scranton since Thursday and some matters developed as to which further conference might be useful before either the operators or the representatives of the miners approach the serious task of formulating a definite agreement for their signatures."

Mr. Mitchell, when shown the dispatch from New York telling of the action of the operators, simply smiled and said that he had not asked for the conference, but that when it was suggested to him if it would be agreeable to meet the operators he said it would. Mr. Darrow and Mr. Lloyd, however, were outspoken regarding the action of the operators. Mr. Darrow said that it was now "up to the operators" and that he would return at once to Scranton, and on Tuesday next would appear before the committee, ready to go on with the hearing. Mr. Lloyd, holding in his hand the Associated Press dispatch, referred to the fact that Friday's conference had been suggested in order to adjust some matters on which there was still some disagreement. "Yet," said Mr. Lloyd, "these same men, who only last week wired the commission their assent to the general provisions of the tentative agreement and upon the strength of which the commission adjourned for a week in order to give the parties time to get together, now go completely back on their former action and call it all off. We are satisfied to go before the commission and continue the hearing." Messrs. Mitchell, Darrow and Lloyd left here at 6:50 over the Pennsylvania railroad for Scranton.

Scranton, Nov. 26.—The independent operators' committee, on their return from New York last night, were all gladness and smiles.

"We have won our point," said Dr. J. M. Rice, of the Riverside Coal company. "We are ready to show to the public that we are paying all the wages our business warrants and that an agreement with John Mitchell's organization is undesirable because of its un-American ideas. The big companies have come to our way of thinking and a settlement 'out of court' is no longer a possibility." Other members of the committee spoke in a similar strain.

As viewed from this point the hearings will be proceeded with on Dec. 3 as if the recess of the commission was nothing more than an adjournment to give the interested parties an opportunity to spend Thanksgiving at home.

ENORMOUS RAILROAD FIGURES.

Preliminary Report of Interstate Commerce Commission Shows Increased Earnings.

Washington, Nov. 26.—The preliminary report of the interstate commerce commission on the income account of railways in the United States for the year ended June 20, last, contains returns of railway companies operating 195,945 miles of line, or probably 98 per cent of the total railway mileage of the United States. The passenger earnings of these railways were $472,429,165, and the freight earnings $1,200,884,603. Including these and other earnings from operation, gross earnings amounted to $1,711,754,200, or $8,736 per mile of line, and operating expenses, $1,106,137,405, or $5,645 per mile of line, showing that net earnings were $605,616,795, or $3,091 per mile. The net earnings were $51,395,421 greater than during the previous year.

The total income of the operating roads of the country, including $82,714,492 derived from investments and miscellaneous sources, was $688,331,287. The deductions from income aggregated $458,459,961. This amount comprised interest on funded debt, rent of leased lines, betterments charged to income, taxes ($49,426,675) and various minor expenditures. The dividends declared on stocks amounted to $150,685,959, substantially $29,834,690 greater than for the previous year. The surplus from the operations of the roads was $79,185,367. The complete report of the previous year gave a surplus of $84,764,782. As this report relates to operating roads only, it does not include dividends paid by leased lines from the income they receive as rental.

DOROTHY'S THANKSGIVING

BY J. H. CONNELLY

(COPYRIGHT 1902 BY J. H. CONNELLY.)

MISTRESS DOROTHY TREDWELL was a very angry old lady and looked it. Red spots glowed in her cheeks, that usually were nearly as white as her silvery hair, her thin lips were drawn in a pale straight line, and her eyes flashed fire, yet pride and conscious obligation to ancestry, breeding and social position forbade sacrifice of her dignity by free expression of her feeling.

"So," she said, with painful suppression of her wrath, "your wish to spend the day with Mary Wallace was a deliberate falsehood, uttered for betrayal of my confidence, to make opportunity for your doing this shameful thing!"

"It is not a shameful thing for a girl to marry the man she loves," protested the handsome, tearful young woman kneeling before her. "I did not want to deceive you, but you made me do so, you were so unreasonable and unsympathetic."

"Unreasonable because I knew best what was for your good; unsympathetic because I did not want my child to throw herself away on a nobody."

"Pardon me, Mistress Tredwell," spoke up a tall, good looking young man who had until now kept silent in the background since his introduction by Priscilla as my "husband, Nathan Gordon." And, though the lady quite ignored him, he continued, "The Gordons are as old and good a family as the Tredwells, and I'm sure I have brought no disgrace on the name."

She suffered mentally as never before.

Priscilla resumed: "You wanted me to marry Abner Parker, though I told you I hated him, and forbade my even seeing Nathan, whom I loved. Don't be unkind, mother, dear. I love you none the less for loving Nathan. You married the man of your choice, and I have done the same; that is all. Will you not forgive me?"

"No, I will not. Go your ways and let me see you no more. As you have made your bed, so you shall lie. Priscilla Tredwell is no more for me, and I do not wish to know Mistress Nathan Gordon."

"Come, wife," said the young man, with a touch of brusqueness in his manner. "Demean yourself no more. We are only wasting time here. We will be happy despite her." And, masterfully drawing her arm within his, he led her out, with no backward look or word of farewell.

"Oh, Sister Dorothy," wailed a quavering voice as a woman several years older than Mistress Tredwell came from the dark corner where she had been silently weeping, "we'll never see Priscilla any more! And she was the last. How can we two old women keep Thanksgiving alone tomorrow?"

"Sister Sally, don't be a fool!" snapped Dorothy.

Truly it was a mockery of a Thanksgiving dinner to which the old ladies sat down the next day. A heavy snowstorm during the preceding night served as an excuse for Mistress Tredwell remaining home from church service.

The almost round table bore substantial and dainty viands enough to feed a dozen, but the two old women sat down to it alone. They bowed their heads while Mistress Dorothy said grace, inaudibly and briefly. Then Jane, the "hired help," brought in the soup.

"Oh, Sister Dorothy," exclaimed Sally tearfully, "I can't eat! I don't see how you can have the heart to, I'm sure I don't."

"Sally, don't be a fool," retorted Dorothy sharply. But that habitual injunction for once failed of its usually repressive effect upon Sally's demonstrations of emotion.

"I don't care what you say now, Dorothy. I just must speak. I'm heartbroken. Five years ago there were four leaves more in this table. Reuben was with us then, dear boy! Oh, God knows where he is now! And so was Rebecca—and, oh, the house has never been the same since she went away!"

Mistress Tredwell, with a fine affectation of placid unconcern, went on taking her soup, but the hand that held the spoon would tremble.

Sally went on: "You set your face like a flint against Reuben marrying the girl he loved, and she was as good a girl as ever was, only you must needs try to compel him to take another. Manlike, he did as he was a mind to, and you lost him. Only three extra leaves were wanted in the table the next two Thanksgivings. Then the same thing happened with Rebecca. You tried to make her marry David Purcell, who hadn't a thing but his money to recommend him, and, having, like you, an iron will that would rather break than bend, she went off, and you've never heard of her since."

"You have," interrupted Dorothy, with a sudden flush of color and a flash in her eyes.

"Yes, thank God, I have! The dear girl has written to me again and again, but she made me promise on the Bible that I'd never tell you a word about her until you asked, and have you ever asked?"

Dorothy closed her lips tightly.

"No, you haven't, and for all you know she may have starved or gone wrong."

"And I do not ask now," firmly replied the obdurate mother.

"Then two extra leaves were more than enough, for only Priscilla was left. And now she's gone. Oh, you unhappy woman, can you not see that because they are your children you cannot drive them?"

"May I help you to some of the turkey?"

"No, Dorothy; I can't eat!" cried Sally, bursting into tears and making a precipitate retreat from the table.

Mistress Tredwell kept her seat, took a slice of the turkey's breast, helped herself to the cranberry jelly and nibbled a stalk of celery, but her eating was only a pretense—pride's bluff against loneliness and misery. For a long time she sat motionless, staring at vacancy until her eyes filled with tears, which she dashed angrily away, as if ashamed of them.

Two Thanksgivings went by upon which there was no commemorative dinner in the Tredwell mansion, and a third dawned with no happier promise. As upon the morning after Priscilla achieved her independence, the ground was covered deeply by new fallen snow, but this time it did not prevent Mistress Dorothy Tredwell going to church. Warmly wrapped, she went in the cutter, driven by the hired man John.

Perhaps something in the sermon touched the hard old woman's heart; possibly the sight of the happy families filling the church—families swollen at this season to abnormal size by the annual gathering of loved ones from far and near—brought home to her a new realization of the miserable loneliness of her old age. At all events, she was conscious of suffering mentally as she never had before, for at last the doubt had risen in her mind whether her unhappy condition was not of her own making instead of a mysterious dispensation of Providence which had afflicted her with exceptionally disobedient and unfeeling children, the latter being the view she had long cultivated. "Pardon and forgive me, O God, if the fault has been mine," she moaned while walking slowly from the gate to her gloomy and cheerless home. Sighing, she opened the front door; then stood transfixed by astonishment. It seemed to her that she heard echoing in the hall musical peals of childish laughter. She stood listening in doubting wonder. Yes, the laughter was real, and with it mingled Sister Sally's aged treble, prattling baby talk in the parlor. Cautiously she glided to and peered through the door, which stood a little ajar.

Sally sat upon the floor, embracing a sturdy golden haired little child that was patting with its fat hands her withered cheeks and laughing loudly.

"Children always loved her better than me. Even my own did so, I believe," jealously thought the hungry hearted woman at the door.

Then a fresh, melodious voice full of a mother's tenderness called from the unseen part of the room behind the door: "Come, pet; back to mamma, Ransom. Come now."

Mistress Tredwell gasped and pressed a hand upon her heart at the hearing of that voice, and something dimmed her sight so that she could hardly see the baby, with anxiety in his blue eyes and laughter still wreathing his cherry lips, swaying, balancing, venturing slowly step by step his great feat of toddling across the floor. The old lady threw open the door, and with steps almost as unsteady as the child's tottered to the little fellow, fell upon her knees and clasped him to her breast, sobbing, "God has forgiven me!"

"Oh, mother, mother! I'm so glad!" cried the young woman, Priscilla herself, kneeling to embrace her two dear ones, while Ransom, evidently thinking it all excellent play, crowed with delight and cuddled close to the elder woman, making believe to escape capture by mamma.

"I was just determined, mamma, that you should see baby. I didn't believe you could and stay angry with me," said Priscilla when the excitement of greeting was a little calmed.

"You have named him after your father?"

"Yes, mamma. Nathan wanted to as much as I did. Nathan is real good, mamma. Indeed he is. And I want you to forgive him too."

"Gladly, my child! I wish he were here."

"He will be in a minute. He's sitting in the barn waiting for his welcome."

"Let him wait no longer."

Aunt Sally, nimbly almost as in the days of her youth, ran out to call him. When he was brought and his welcome assured, Sally asked, "Now, Dorothy, wouldn't you like to know about the others?"

"Yes, Sally, I would."

"Thank God, it has come to you at last! Here are letters and Thanksgiving greetings from both. They're too far off to come, but send their love. And there's a picture of Rebecca's two children. They do look sort of shameless, but her husband is consul in a hot country, where, she says, the children all go around that way, even in November."

"Oh, Priscilla!" exclaimed her mother, "if I had only known you were coming! We have got out of the way of having Thanksgivings, and there isn't a bite in the house fit to eat today."

"I'll see if I can't scare up something," said Sally hopefully, going out to see, and presently, when she called them into the dining room, the big table, with all its four extra leaves, was seen to be none too large for the dinner she had "scared up." There were a splendid salmon and a magnificent turkey, so big, brown and fragrant that the mouth watered at the sight, and there were mince and pumpkin pies and what not else that is sacred to New England's happiest festal occasion. And when Mistress Dorothy saw it all, she cried to Sally: "Oh, you old conspirator! Of course you knew in advance, and this explains why you've been over at Mrs. Green's nearly all the time for three days. But I forgive you."

BLOOD WINE

Cures Bright's Disease

John T. Foster.

Kidney diseases, including Bright's, is gaining an alarming foothold upon Americans, and the percentage of deaths all over the country in 1902 shows a big increase. The slightest tendency to weakness of the kidneys, indicated by lameness, soreness, pains, bearing-down sensation across the small of the back, cloudy, colored, having a sediment or otherwise unnatural appearance of the urine, is sufficient proof that something is wrong. If you take "Blood Wine" for your kidneys it will astonish you with its quick and thorough action. It has a specific action on the kidneys simultaneously with its effect upon the blood, and will check an approaching disease of the kidneys, as well as drive off an old chronic case.

Mrs. M. E. Thayer of North Brookfield, Mass., says:

"I have been troubled with rheumatism and my kidneys for more than ten years, been treated without much help. My back ached until I was almost crazy, with swelling of the feet and limbs. I tried your 'Blood Wine,' and the first bottle helped me. After taking the second bottle my back quit aching, and the fifth bottle brought about a thorough cure."

Mr. John T. Foster, of Manchester, N. H., speaks as thousands speak:

"'Blood Wine' is truly a most remarkable medicine. In my case its work has been little short of a miracle. For some time I suffered with rheumatism and kidney disease, of a most painful and advanced type. I tried about everything, without relief, and expected the same result from 'Blood Wine,' but fortunately for me when I struck 'Blood Wine,' I struck the Rock of Gibraltar. It stood my severe test and conquered my trouble and today I am a well man, due wholly to this great medicine. To my mind there is absolutely nothing that will compare with it, and I have no hesitation in advising any one in ill health to give it a thorough test."

Fifty cents a bottle.

THANKSGIVING .... POETRY

BACK to the home of childhood,
Though scattered far and wide,
Back to the dear old kitchen—
Yes, back to your mother's side.
Come, kiss her wrinkled forehead,
Her hair, as white as snow,
And sit down on her old stool,
As in the long ago.

While father bends above you
Weak with the weight of years,
His trembling voice with gladness,
His dim eyes filled with tears.
To both the greatest pleasure
The year brings on its way
Is this: The glad homecoming
Upon Thanksgiving day.

Once more the rooms re-echo
From kitchen, stairs and hall,
The sound of old time voices
And merry dinner call,
While many sweet grandchildren,
With laughter light and gay,
Come pressing round the table
This glad Thanksgiving day.

THE GLAD HOMECOMING.

So come, ye sons and daughters,
From restless city strife;
Come ere you lose your relish
For the quiet joys of life;
Come back, ye roving children,
From prairies far and wide
And cluster round the hearthstone
Once more at eventide.

Take up your song of childhood
And sing it o'er again;
Forget that ye are matrons
Or business loving men,
And if your eyes grow misty
Rejoice that it is so;
A heart sincerely tender
Is the purest one to know.

Remember, with your loved ones
Life's lamp doth feebly burn;
Your parents may not linger
To greet a late return.
Forget them not, though patient;
Oh, come now while you may!
Praise God; rejoice together
On this Thanksgiving day.

—Good Housekeeping.

Soliloquy of a Turkey.

I know that Thanksgiving day's most here,
And it makes me long to fly,
For I've reached my prime, and it's mighty clear
That it's time for me to die.

I saw the head of the house come out,
And he smiled as he gazed at me,
And he cried aloud that there was no doubt
What a comfortable meal I'd be.

Oh, I've got to go! And it gives me a fit,
Though it isn't so much for my life
That I care about, but he can't carve a bit,
And I've got to be hacked by his wife.

—New York Herald.

Sad Time For Them.

Of what are the turkeys thinking
Out yonder in the yard,
With their red eyes sadly blinking?
Do they think their fate is hard?
Are they on life reflecting
And to hear their final call
Each moment now expecting?
No; turkeys don't think at all.

Thanksgiving Trust.

Lord, I give thanks!
Last year, thou knowest, my best ambitions failed;
My back with scourgings of defeat was flailed;
My eyes felt oft the sharp salt wash of tears;
No guerdon blessed the tireless toil of years;
Fast in the snares my helpless feet were tied,
Yet in my woes thou didst with me abide.
Lord, I give thanks!

—Susie M. Best in Lippincott's.

His Preference.

"What portion of the fowl do you prefer?"

"Oh, anything but the Napoleon, sir!"

"What do you mean?" asked Carver, with a start.

"I mean I do not want the bony part."

An Unknown Quantity.

She searched through the lexicon once and again,
And her face wore sad lines of misgiving.
"I was seeking," she said, with an accent of pain,
"The Spanish for our word 'Thanksgiving.'"

Not In a Good Set.

"No," exclaimed the mother turkey, "I would prefer my children not to associate with those incubator chicks."

"Because they are so heedless and don't know how to feather their own nests?" inquired the duck.

"No, it isn't that so much I have brooded over," replied the turkey, "but there's something so artificial about them."

However, when the incubator chicks heard this they thought of the funeral baked meats of Thanksgiving and remarked significantly, "Death levels all ranks."—New York Journal.

Chicago, Ill., December 15, 1901.

Gentlemen,—I consider

Dr. Caldwell's (Laxative) Syrup Pepsin

by far the most reliable and efficacious remedy I have ever known for dyspepsia and kindred stomach disorders. Mild and gentle in its action, it does not simply relieve, but cures permanently. It does not nauseate, as so many medicines are apt to do, but can be used in severe cases when almost anything else would distress one. Several of my friends who have used it have had the same very satisfactory results I have, and I therefore feel it is well worthy of highest endorsement.

Very truly yours,
M. C. DALTON, 311 Illinois St.

"Could I live my early life over, this testimonial would not be necessary, though I was no more sinful than thousands of other young men. Early indiscretions, later excesses, exposure to contagious diseases all helped to break down my system. When I commenced to realize my condition I was almost frantic. Doctor after doctor treated me but only gave me relief—not a cure. Hot Springs helped me, but did not cure me. The symptoms always returned. Mercury and Potash drove the poison into my system instead of driving it out. I bless the day your New Method Treatment was recommended to me. 19TH YEAR. NO. 280. EAST LIVERPOOL, O., WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 26, 1902—TWELVE PAGES. TWO CENTS.

SUIT AGAINST C. A. SMITH DECIDED IN HIS FAVOR IN THE COURT AT LISBON

Judge Holds That the Dissatisfied Mine Stockholders Have No Ground on Which to Stand.

A decision was handed down in common pleas court yesterday by Judge W. W. Hole, in which the citizens of East Liverpool generally are much interested.

July 17, 1902, J. G. English, of Danville, Ill., and J. F. English, of Sumter, Ore., filed a suit in common pleas court against C. A. Smith, of East Liverpool and Pittsburg, for $343,907.12 damages. The plaintiffs alleged in their petition that Smith took an option on 980,000 shares of the Golconda Mining company, of Sumter, Ore., and that he agreed to pay for the stock $400,000. When he took this option, it is alleged, the company was reorganized in Smith's interest and he was elected president.

The agreement was that Smith was to contribute to the mining company the sum of $3,500 per month for one year from January 29, 1901, to be used in sinking the shaft 100 feet deeper and otherwise developing the mine.

The plaintiffs' claims were that he sunk the shaft only 90 feet and left the mine in a greatly damaged and unsafe condition; that Smith used the receipts from the sale of gold to develop the mine instead of declaring a dividend and that he did not contribute $3,500 per month to the company; that he carried away assay certificates and machinery belonging to the company; that he never formally surrendered the option, but abandoned the mine on December 1, 1901, and that they took charge of the mine and declared the option at an end on March 5, 1902. They allege they were put to much expense and were unable to sell the stock to as good advantage as they otherwise might and claim that they were damaged by Smith's failure to comply with the agreement.

At the time the suit was filed Mr. Smith retained able counsel and at once filed a demurrer and from the decision of the court in this hearing, it would seem the claim of Mr. Smith made then was well founded. He insisted that the plaintiffs had suffered no considerable damage, and said that he had agreed to reimburse them for the loss, but that no satisfactory agreement could be made.

In his decision Judge Hole sustained the demurrer in detail with the exceptions.

FOUR VICTIMS OF ROBBERY

Thieving Operations Carried On at Two Different Boarding Houses.

A BOARDER WHO SKIPPED

Is Suspected In One Instance—Three Reports Having Lost a Bank Roll. Young Men Suffered Loss—Woman Of $40.

Two daring robberies which occurred in the city yesterday morning have been reported to Chief Thompson.

While three well known young men, William Boone, Mark Tuesberry and William Smith, were absent from their room at Mrs. Ella May Robinson's boarding house, 119 Seventh street, yesterday morning someone entered the apartment and stole valuables amounting to $50. The thieves ransacked every drawer, pocket, valise and trunk in the room and was at no time interrupted in his nefarious work. As a result of the theft Boone lost a gold watch and chain, valued at $36.50; Tuesberry a gold ring valued at $10 and Smith a revolver valued at $4. The exact hour that the robbery was committed is not known but it was after 9 o'clock and before noon.

When the three men went to their room at the noon hour they readily discovered that some one had been trifling with their belongings and upon an investigation discovered their loss.

They are confident that they know who the person is that stole from them, but as the suspect has left the city they do not expect him to be captured and they have given up thought of ever regaining their valuables.

The suspect arrived in the city last Friday from Beaver county, Pa., and applied at the Robinson boarding house for both board and lodging. He gave his name as Evans and said that he was a machinist by trade. He had no money and put off the landlady with the excuse that his trunk would be here in a few days and then he would have sufficient money. The man man left the city yesterday without notifying Mrs. Robinson and the conclusion is reached that he is the guilty party. The police have been given a true description of the man and have been ordered to arrest him if seen on the streets.

An unknown woman at police headquarters this morning stated that some individual entered her room, which is located in the old Davidson opera house yesterday morning and stole a roll of bills amounting to over $40. She has no idea who committed the theft and the police are absolutely without a clue. The act was done while she was in another part of the building. It is said that the woman is employed at the Wallace & Chetwynd pottery.

OHIO TAX LAWS AND CORPORATIONS

Reasons Assigned for the Numerous Charters Granted in West Virginia.

AN EAST LIVERPOOL CASE

Newell Purchase Taken By a Correspondent as an Indication That This City May Lose Its Potteries—Taxes Not Heavy.

"Despite the apparent success of the franchise tax laws of last winter," says a Columbus special to the Cincinnati Enquirer, "there lingers a doubt as to the ultimate effect as revenue raisers. It was only a day or two ago that a leading coal company reduced its capital stock from millions to a beggarly $150,000. The reports from West Virginia show that more Ohio concerns are obtaining charters there than ever before. But the strangest performance of Ohio capitalists up to date is shown by the incorporation of the American Manufacturing company of Chester, W. Va. The purpose of this company is to mill, mine and manufacture articles incident to or connected with the glassware, brick, porcelain and pottery business.

"The incorporators include well-known capitalists, stockholders and officials of the Laughlin China company, the Knowles, Taylor & Knowles company and the Knowles Pottery company, of East Liverpool, some of the individuals being W. E. Wells, E. M. Knowles, Colonel John N. Taylor, G. W. Clark and Joseph G. Lee, of that city. It is stated that these gentlemen, in connection with certain Pittsburg capitalists, intend to found a new pottery town on the West Virginia side of the Ohio river, opposite East Liverpool. They have paid $75,000 for 450 acres of land just below the little town of Chester and will begin work on the factory buildings as soon as possible.

"The conclusion reached by observers here is that these Ohio manufacturers desire to escape the heavy taxation that is now their portion in this state. There is plenty of land in the neighborhood of East Liverpool for the extension of their present plants. Should it mean the transference of the pottery industry to the other side of the river the blow would be a severe one to East Liverpool and Columbiana county, for both virtually depend upon it for prosperous conditions. Homer Laughlin, who is at the head of the china company bearing his name, is now virtually a resident of Los Angeles, Cal., where he lives in the baronial mansion erected by the late Dr. Leslie Keely, the founder of the "gold cure" for the drink habit. He has also erected a number of office buildings in the business section of the busiest city on the California coast outside of San Francisco."

Concerning the above the News Review's Columbus correspondent writes: "One of the political wiseacres at the state capital claims to see in the incorporation of the American Manufacturing company, of Chester, W. Va., under the laws of that state, a scheme on the part of the leading pottery manufacturers of East Liverpool to transfer their plants from that city to Chester for no other purpose than to escape the tax of one-tenth of 1 per cent imposed on corporations under the Willis law. The amount which the Knowles, Taylor & Knowles company pays under this tax is $1,000. Payment is made to the secretary of state and is by him transferred to the state treasury."

W. E. Wells, one of the officers of the new company was interviewed by a News Review reporter at noon today and said: "There doubtless have been a number of companies incorporated in West Virginia recently. They may have done so on account of the tax rates in Ohio, and it is possible many more may take out papers in that state on account of the iniquitous tax regulations."

Edward Burcaw, a brakeman, while running over the top of a freight train on the C. & P. railroad near Port Homer, had his knee badly injured by falling. In jumping from a box car to a gondola loaded with steel rails he fell, striking his knee on one of the rails, splitting the knee cap.

TILT OF THREE COUNCILMEN ENLIVENS THE PROCEEDINGS AT CITY FATHERS' MEETING

Arrangements Will Be Effected Soon For Setting the New Code Machine in Operation.

The meeting of council was enlivened last night by a tilt between the two oldest members of the body, and the brisk interchange of words had a good effect upon the younger representatives. Whatever may be the faults of Uncle Joe Barlow, of the Second, lack of sincerity is not one of them, and when his word was questioned by George Peach, of the Third, Mr. Barlow sailed in and "trimmed him up properly." Uncle Joe had been arguing in favor of making amends for the damage to the property of Thomas Chadwick, of Lincoln avenue. This was not a new subject to Mr. Barlow. Many a time and often within the past few months he has explained to the council that something should be done with the Chadwick lot.

At the last meeting the engineer was instructed to prepare an estimate of the probable cost to the city of making the property safe, for the winter at least. Engineer Kelly had the figures ready last evening, and when he said about $192.50 would cover the expense, Uncle Joe and a majority of the members were in favor of going ahead with the work at once.

Mr. Marshall could not see the matter in any other light than a "graft," as he expressed it, and this did not have a tendency to make the Second ward member any easier in his mind. He allowed that when the subject of "grafts" suggested itself to a man, he must be a little "grafty" on his own account, and ventured the assertion that there had been others.

George Peach, of the Third ward, here rung in with the information that an appropriation for an improvement such as had been suggested would be illegal. He declared he would be as much in favor of doing something for the relief of Mr. Chadwick as anyone, but he did not purpose that illegal action should be taken.

"How about those little technicalities you have passed over, Mr. Peach? You know many illegal actions have been taken here," said Mr. Barlow.

Just at this point was where the fine works were due. Swinging his arms in the air, Mr. Peach defied the venerable Barlow to cite a case where he

SMALLPOX SCARE VERY SHORT LIVED

House Was Quarantined Last Night and the Quarantine Raised Today.

THREE PHYSICIANS CERTAIN

That the Patient Is Not Afflicted With the Disease, Though Another Doctor Thinks Otherwise—Mrs. Barnes the Sufferer.

There was a flurry of excitement in the city this morning when it became generally known that Mrs. Anna B. Barnes, of 167 Church alley, was placed under quarantine last evening at about 9 o'clock, she having showed signs of smallpox.

Mrs. Barnes was pronounced afflicted with the terrible disease by Dr. W. J. Taylor, and it was upon his report to Health Officer Ogden that the house was quarantined. This afternoon, however, after examination was made by Drs. Ogden, Clark and Harrison, a diagnosis was reported to the effect that that she is not suffering with smallpox and Sanitary Policeman Burgess was ordered to relieve the guards and remove the sign from the door of the house.

One physician holding that the woman has the disease and three that she has not, it seems pretty safe to let the matter drop and cease fearing.

Dr. Taylor, when interviewed this afternoon by a News Review reporter, said: "Yes, sir, I pronounced the woman sick with smallpox or variloid, which in reality is the same, it being only a mild form. I have had much experience with smallpox and I don't believe I could be deceived. However, if I am mistaken I am truly glad of it, because I fully realize what a smallpox scourge to the city would mean. The woman came to my office last night and I made a careful examination of her sickness.

"Two signs which always accompany the disease were much in evidence with her. The familiar fumes which come from a patient filled my room when she was in it. And when I felt her forehead I discovered a never-failing sign. Under the skin I could distinctly feel scores of little raisings which to me are like bird shot. I have never treated a smallpox case in my life that the same feeling was not in evidence. You can quote me as saying that the woman is sick with the smallpox."

Every preparation was made to protect the residents of the city against the disease had it developed as at first reported. Officer Burgess had arranged with Otto Schmidtbauer and Hamilton Dailey to keep watch at the house, and Mayor Davidson announced this morning that he intended calling a meeting of the board of health for tonight to take steps in regard to the people who had association with the woman during the past few days.

Judgment for $2,000 Was Given in Bradshaw Estate Case.

Lisbon, November 26.—(Special)—In the case of W. L. Smith, administrator of the Bradshaw estate in East Liverpool, a decision was given this morning by Judge Hole, the court holding that Theodore Bradshaw had made a warrantee deed to his mother in his life time for property mortgaged to its full value, and that, as the administrator had to pay this mortgage he had a right to collect the money paid from the party making the warranty deed, and judgment was rendered for the plaintiff for $2,000.

MINE INSPECTOR MOVES QUARTERS

District Deputy Davis Has Moved From Dell Roy to Salem.

THE SALINEVILLE CHARTER

Lost to One of the Miners' Unions Probably Does Not End the Case The Men Objected to Working in Other Mines.

From a Staff Correspondent.

Columbus, November 26.—James P. Davis, deputy mine inspector for the Sixth district, composing the counties of Columbiana, Carroll, Mahoning, Portage, Trumbull and the township of Springfield in Jefferson county, has moved from Dell Roy, Carroll county, to Salem, which becomes headquarters of the district. His term expires next spring. Mr. Davis is on his second term. When State Mine Inspector Biddison took charge of the office two years ago last January he re-arranged the districts of the state and made one district out of portions of two districts in the southeastern part of the state, of which Mr. Davis and Reese T. Davis, of East Palestine, were deputy inspectors. Both were thrown into the same district and each applied for the deputyship. After considering the matter for several months State Inspector Biddison tendered the appointment to Mr. Davis, of Dell Roy. The salary is $1,200 per annum and expenses.

Secretary-Treasurer Savage, of the United Mine Workers of America, has returned from Salineville, where he went to secure the charter and seal of the local union, which was suspended for disobeying the orders of the organization. The members of the local refused to work with three Italians who were members in good standing of the state organization. The charter and seal were surrendered to the state official promptly. Mr. Savage said to the correspondent of this paper that he thought there would be more trouble and that the local would take steps to get reinstated. The Italians are working in another mine and he was assured that there would be no further discrimination against them. There are four other locals in Salineville, all in good standing.

Mr. Crew, a native of Butler township, Columbiana county, who is connected with the postmaster general's department at Washington, and Mr. Holloway, of Columbiana, employed in the postal department in this division, in company with five other postal officials, were in this city yesterday, inspecting mail catching cranes.

HOUSES STANDING IN THE STREET

Many Complaints About Two Buildings That Encumber City's Thoroughfares.

ONE HAS STOOD LONG TIME

On Jefferson Street Near Fifth—Law on the Subject Found—No Building to Stand in the Street More Than Three Days.

Mayor Davidson, Chief Thompson and City Clerk Davidson for more than ten days past have been bothered almost every hour in the day with remarks of censure concerning the allowing of a building to stand intact in the middle of Jefferson street, near Fifth street. This morning their attention was called to another building which adorns the public highway on West Market street.

The three officials in question have been unable to advise the many who have registered objections and have also refrained from any words of repudiation, due to the fact that none were confident of the stand which they could take in the matter. According to an ordinance in the ordinance book held by the mayor the owner of the building which stands at Jefferson and Fifth streets has committed no wrong and cannot be held liable. He received a permit from the city clerk to remove the house and that was deemed sufficitnt However, this morning the officials were prompted to scour the 400 or more ordinances that are contained in the ordinance book and by so doing they discovered one that will result either in the removal of the buildings or the city will look to the owner for damages. The ordinance was passed October 4, 1897, and is styled "An ordinance to regulate the removal of any building over or upon any of the streets, alleys or public grounds of said city."

The ordinance in full is as follows:

"Section 1.—Be it ordained and enacted by the council of the city of East Liverpool, two-thirds of all members concurring, that no erson or persons shall remove or cause to be removed on, along or across any street, alley or public way within said city any dwelling house, business house, stable of other structure without having first obtained from the city clerk a written permit to do so.

"Section 2.—Upon applying for such permit and before the same shall be issued the person or persons seeking the same shall file in the office of the city clerk a bond in the sum of $500, payable to the city of East Liverpool for use of the party injured and with sufficient sureties to be approved by the city clerk, conditional that said person or persons shall fully repair any or all damages done to said street or other city or private property by the removal of said building and shall save and keep harmless the said city from and expense, loss or damages that it may sustain by reason of said building. The person or persons receiving such permit shall exercise the same, subject to all other grants and franchises granted to others by any ordinance or resolution of council.

"Section 3.—No person or persons removing such buildings shall permit the same to remain on any particular block on any street or public way for a longer period than three days, and a good and sufficient passage way for one vehicle shall at all times be provided on one side of said building.

"Section 4.—Any person violating any of the provisions of this ordinance shall be fined not less than $50 and not more than $100 and the costs of prosecution."

With the above ordinance to act upon there is likely to be something doing. For the one located at the corner of Fifth and Jefferson streets the owner simply has a permit to move it, and the building has stood in one position at least three times the number of days legally allowed. The one standing in West Market street was placed there without the owner even securing a permit, it is said.

Mayor Davidson frankly admitted that he did not know that there was an ordinance such as the above. In regard to it he said: "It simply makes the argument which I have voiced for two years stronger. When my attention was called to the fact that the building was standing in the street, I referred to the ordinance book which I am supposed to consult when all like problems arise. In that book I could find nothing that would give me power to order the removal of the building. I tell you the ordinances of the city must be codified. I find if I want to be certain of any ordinance, that I have first before me the task of scanning the 400 ordinances which do not appear in the book. I have advocated a recodification of the ordinances and am satisfied that many things will run as they should not if my suggestion is not heeded and that very soon."

KILLED A THOUSAND

Great Record Made By Two Hunters, But It Was Not This Year.

Salem, November 26.—The publication of an item concerning the 75th birthday anniversary of Aaron Wilson last Saturday has called to Mr. Wilson's mind a reminiscence of a season's hunt some 25 years ago. At that time, which was before the present restrictions of season limit of number of quail were in force, Mr. Wilson and the late Charles I. Hayes were very fond of hunting.

For years Messrs. Hayes and Wilson had been in the habit of hunting together, and at the beginning of one fall season one suggested to the other that, they keep a record and at the end of the season figure up the number of quail and pheasant they had bagged. Accordingly, a board was tacked up at Mr. Wilson's stable, and each evening when they returned from a hunt each would tally the number of birds he had killed that day. This was kept up through the season, at the end of which the number was added up and it was found that the two had killed a total of 965 quail and 77 pheasants during the season. They did not count the rabbits taken.

Albert Hayes, the son of C. I. Hayes, still has the old muzzle-loading fowling piece which his father used to hunt with. Mr. Wilson disposed of his gun years ago. The elder Mr. Hayes takes a keen delight in hunting, and during his lifetime went out hunting numerous times during the season. Mr. Wilson says that the gun owned by Mr. Hayes has, in its time, killed more game than any other gun in the state.

EAST END

Pleaded Guilty to Stone-Throwing When He Had Nothing to Do With the Case.

About ten days ago the passengers on a northbound C. & P. trains were badly frightened when a rock came crashing through a window while the train was passing the Smith & Phillips pottery. Both the trainmen and the passengers thought the missile had been thrown with a malicious intent. Several small boys were at play along the track and it was evident that it had been thrown by one of them. A railroad detective was notified of the occurrence and was provided with a description of one of these boys, Roy, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Mel Martin, of Calhoun's addition.

The detective went to the East End and captured the lad, who was so badly frightened that he thought the only way to save himself was to admit his guilt. Later it was found out that the boy had nothing at all to do with the affair and he was released. It is not likely that other arrests will be made, because of the meagre description of the guilty party.

Wanted Interest on $1.06.

The case of J. E. Forbes versus James Parker was heard yesterday afternoon by 'Squire Carman. The suit grew out of a load of coal which the plaintiff claimed he sold and delivered to the defendant in December of last year. The defendant claims that the coal in question was not delivered, but made a tender of $1.06. The amount asked was $1.06 with interest, so the tender was refused and the case went to trial. Attorney J. E. Davis represented the plaintiff and W. E. Warren the defendant. The plaintiff was allowed the amount of the tender.

Rummage Sale a Success.

The bazaar and rummage sale in the P. H. C. hall last evening given by the Ladies' Aid society and the Young Ladies' guild, of the Erie street M. E. church, was a big success in spite of the unfavorable weather. The hall was thronged during the evening and the ladies were kept busy serving refreshments and disposing of the articles on the rummage tables. The pieces of art needle work contributed by the young ladies found a ready sale. The proceeds will amount to about $50.

Lecture Will be Interesting.

The free lecture Thanksgiving evening at the Second Presbyterian church promises to be interesting and entertaining. The lecturer, Rev. Alexander Sharp, of Mingo, spent eight years in the northern and western countries of South America as a missionary, and his talk will be of the life, character and religion of these people. The opportunity will be presented for a free will thank offering at this service.

Have a New Horse.

The street committee of the city council has provided the East End fire station with an additional horse, something that has long been needed by this department. The new animal is a handsome gray about 15 hands high and four years old. He has not been broken yet for fire department work. Captain Terrence has named him George, in honor of Councilman Peach, chairman of the street committee.

Beatty Improving.

Metch Beatty, whose finger was amputated a few days ago as the result of an injury from a wire received in the slip room of the Standard pottery, is reported to be improving nicely. Blood poisoning had set in, making it necessary to amputate the member. It will be several weeks before he can return to work.

A Correction.

A typographical error yesterday made it appear that the Thanksgiving supper and entertainment to be given in the P. H. C. hall Thursday evening is under the auspices of the I. O. O. F. It should have read I. O. O. C. There is no organization of the former in the East End.

EAST END AFFAIRS.

Stomachs on Stilts.

The man who puts on stilts does not increase his actual stature by the breadth of a hair. He feels taller while he's on the stilts, and when he's off them he feels shorter than he ever felt. Stimulants are the stilts of the stomach. They make a man feel better for the time being, but he feels a great deal worse for them afterward.

The need of the man whose stomach is "weak" is not stimulation but strength. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery perfectly answers that need. It cures the diseases of the digestive and nutritive system which make the stomach "weak." It enables the digestion and assimilation of food, so that the body receives the nutrition on which depends its strength.

"I took two bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery for stomach trouble," writes Clarence Carnes, Esq., Taylorstown, Loudoun Co., Va. "It did me so much good that I didn't take any more. I can eat most anything now. I am so well pleased with it I hardly know how to thank you for your kind information. I tried a whole lot of things before I wrote to you. A gentleman told me of your medicine, and how it cured his wife. Thought I would try a bottle of it. Am now glad that I did, for I do not know what I should have done had it not been for Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery."

The sole motive for substitution is to permit the dealer to make the little more profit paid by the sale of less meritorious medicines. He gains; You lose. Therefore accept no substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery."

The sluggish liver is made active by the use of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets.

What to do Until the Doctor Arrives.

MEETING OF CABINET.

Cuban Reciprocity and Canal Treaty With Colombia Principally Discussed.

ALL MEMBERS PRESENT BUT ONE

Secretary Hay Unable to Report Progress in Canal Negotiations. Suggested that Colombia Hopes to Profit by Lapsing of Franchise.

Washington, Nov. 26.—The cabinet meeting yesterday was devoted almost exclusively to the consideration of the status of the reciprocity treaty with Cuba and the canal treaty with Colombia. The hitches that have occurred in the negotiations were discussed, as were also the prospects of settlement.

Secretary Hay, while presenting the subject of the canal negotiations to the cabinet, was not able to report that any progress had been made during the past week. In fact, it appears that the negotiations have come to a dead stop, and while no such thing as an ultimatum has passed the precise situations may be described in the statement that the Colombian minister here, Concha, has distinctly informed the state department that he cannot in behalf of his government accept the last proposition of the United States as a basis of a canal treaty. The state department has already let it be known that it has come to the end of its concessions, so the chances of a renewal of negotiations in the near future are not very bright.

This state of affairs will stimulate the negotiations with Nicaragua and Costa Rica for the alternate route, but it now appears that diplomats of those countries are not disposed to allow themselves to be used to coerce Colombia, and therefore are desirous of remaining in the background until it shall be clearly established that no treaty can be made between Colombia and the United States.

One of the statements of fact in connection with the Panama route which has been brought to the attention of the state department is that original canal concessions will expire in 1904, and it has been suggested that the Colombian government has that fact in mind and is disposed to refrain from making a treaty now in the expectation that the franchise will lapse and it thus may be in a position to build the canal itself or to sell a new concession. Such a course will raise a very serious question between the Colombian government, the Panama Canal company, the French government and the government of the United States as to whether or not a supplementary decree extending the concessions 10 years from 1904 was valid.

President Roosevelt laid before the cabinet his annual message to congress in completed form. It was sent to the printer yesterday. Most of the features of the document were familiar to the members of the cabinet and only such parts of the message as had not been considered previously were read in full. All the members were present except Secretary Root.

Other Washington News.

The President and Mrs. Roosevelt entertained a large party of friends at dinner at the White House last night.

Charles V. Herdliska, United States consul at Callao, Peru, has tendered his resignation and it has been accepted.

Madame Duse, the Italian actress, was received by the president and Mrs. Roosevelt yesterday at the White House.

Brigadier General Charles C. Hood has been relieved at his own request. His successor will not be selected until congress meets.

Midshipman Aiken, who was injured in the Annapolis-Bucknell football game 10 days ago, was reported better yesterday, and hopes are now entertained for his recovery.

The remains of three officers of the army were interred in the Arlington national cemetery yesterday with the usual military ceremonies. These were Major Walter Reed, of the medical department; Captain John F. McBlain, Ninth cavalry, and Captain J. Y. Slow, a quartermaster of volunteers during the Civil War.

Justice Harlan, of the United States supreme court, on Dec. 9, will have completed 25 years of service as a member of that court, and his friends at the bar throughout the country have arranged to express their appreciation of his services by a dinner in his honor on that evening at the new Williard hotel in this city.

A cablegram received at the state department yesterday from Minister Squiers, at Havana, reports that the government is taking a firm stand and that the strike situation is better. The conditions in Havana are being watched with the closest interest here, as it is believed the Cuban government is about to be subjected to a severe test.

REASONS FOR GIVING THANKS.

Thanksgiving day, first celebrated almost 300 years ago by a little band of Puritans at Plymouth, is now observed in every country on earth where Americans have a permanent or even a temporary abiding-place. A purely American festival, its observance has become world-wide. The miners of Alaska, the soldiers in the Philippines, the citizens of Hawaii and Porto Rico, the American oil well drillers in Russia, the pioneers in new industrial enterprises in Africa and South America, will all celebrate the day with the same zest that marks the observance of the festival at home. Eeven in the government house at Calcutta, where a titled lady of American birth presides, there will be a Thanksgiving feast that will rival the best in the United States. Thanksgiving day will be the occasions for family reunions in every city, village and hamlet throughout the land and in scattered farm houses everywhere in the United States. It was instituted primarily as a farmers' festival, a period for rejoicing and expressing gratitude to Providence for good crops and other gifts that mean happiness and comfort to the recipients. It is still, in many a farm house, the one day of all the year most eagerly looked forward to by young and old and most feelingly and happily celebrated.

A contented mind and a sense of gratitude for manifold blessings are all that are necessary to the proper observance and proper enjoyment of the national festival. And nowhere in the world does contentment reign in more homes than here in America. If our forefathers, on the bleak Massachusetts coast, wresting crops by primitive means from an unfertile soil, exposed to disease and peril, with hostile savages as their only neighbors, with relatives and friends distant a journey of months across the wide ocean; if the Pilgrims who instituted Thanksgiving day could find anything for which to be thankful—and they found reasons in abundance for gratitude to God—how much, how infinitely much more, have the men, women and children of today, with comforts, luxuries and conveniences of which our ancestors never dreamed, to show appreciation of! Let us celebrate by rejoicing and being glad, forgetting for the time evil and annoyance; but amid our feasting and merriment let us not forget the origin of Thanksgiving day and the impressive lesson thereof and fail not to give thanks that our lot has been cast amid a glorious civilization and the peace, prosperity and progressiveness of the twentieth century, which is likely to be memorable as the greatest period of human advancement yet known in all history.

The greater Pittsburg idea is again finding favor in the Smoky city. If Pittsburg would extend her limits as Chicago has done, she would occupy a position on the census list commensurate with her importance as a commercial center. With present circumscribed limits this is an impossibility.

A New York woman is reported to have lived in luxury for 20 years on the proceeds of begging letters. Fortunate, those who value ease more than self-respect are comparatively few.

East Liverpool tolerates all sorts of rubbish on the streets with remarkable patience. But when it comes to blocking a main thoroughfare for weeks with a whole house it is no wonder they kick.

President Castro, of Venezuela, more enlightened than the average South American, has a good word for the United States and wants to help us enforce the Monroe doctrine when the time comes.

At this season the eagle is not in it. The turkey is the American bird. He is an American product, and we all admire him.

Herr Krupp left anywhere from $75,000,000 to 150,000,000, not a bad fortune for a gunsmith to accumulate.

Yes, East Liverpool needs a new city hall. But the need of paying some of the city's debt is more pressing.

AT THE THEATER

The management of the Grand opera house has made especial arrangements with the company playing here this week for one of the strongest bills in its repertoire, and one which will appeal particularly to the ladies and children, for the matinee attraction tomorrow afternoon. "When New York Sleeps" has been chosen, and it has been said by most eminent critics that the cast representing the Murray & Mackey stock company surpasses itself in this piece. The attraction for tomorrow, Thanksgiving afternoon promises to be the best attended of the week.

"The Reward of Crime" was rendered last evening at the Grand to an unusually large Tuesday night house, by the Murray & Mackey stock company. The Murrays, John J. and Florence, are artists of rare ability, and in their respective comedy roles aided each other in entertaining an appreciative audience. Miss Murray is not an ideal soubrette, being a trifle

ONLY SIX PRESENT

And the Wellsville Council Meeting Was a Very Short One.

A five-minute meeting of council was held last evening at the city hall, at which time an ordinance levying assessments upon property benefited by the paving of Liverpool street and authorizing the issue of bonds in anticipation of the collection was passed upon its second reading. The ordinance will be passed finally at the regular meeting of council next Monday evening, while it is hoped that at least eight councilmen will be present. Only six were present last evening and for that reason no important business could be transacted.

It has been stated by a certain city official that were all of the councilmen to receive a compensation for attending the meetings, there would have been many more of them present than there were last evening. It is a hard matter to get council together, excepting on the regular meeting night, and it seems to make no difference if business of the most vital importance is to be transacted.

ANTI-SALOON CONVENTION

Three Wellsville Pastors And Dr. Tracy Will Attend the Columbus Meeting.

Rev. and Mrs. Lemoine C. Wells and Dr. N. W. Tracy, the Kentucky evangelist, who has been holding a series of lectures in this city during the past two weeks, left this morning for West Lafayette, O., where they will visit at Rev. Mr. Wells' subject will be "Possession Is Dispossession." From there Rev. Mr. Wells and Dr. Tracy will go to Columbus, where they will attend the convention of the Ohio Anti-Saloon league, which is to be held December 1, 2 and 3.

Rev. C. E. Clark, of the First M. E. church, and Rev. W. M. Glasgow, pastor of the United Presbyterian church of this city, will leave Monday for Columbus, where they will also attend the convention.

REVIVAL MEETINGS

An Interesting Series Begun at the Christian Church in Wellsville.

A series of evangelical and revival meetings were begun at the Christian church last evening. The pastor, Rev. W. C. Prewitt, will preach each evening throughout the entire series of about three weeks.

The song services of the meetings are being conducted by G. L. Cook, of Lorain. Mr. Cook has had considerable experience in this line of work and has always been successful. He is a minister of the gospel and has held several pastorates. He will assist throughout the series of meetings.

Earl E. Sells, of Bridgeport, who for the past six months has held a position as copying operator in the dispatcher's office at the Third street depot, has been promoted to manager of the C. & P. office and the Western Union telegraph office at Bellaire, a very desirable position. Mr. Sells had become quite popular among Wellsville society people and his friends are very sorry to see him leave the city. He left last evening for Bellaire and will begin his new duties this morning.

Health Board Meeting.

A short meeting of the board of health was held last evening in Mayor Fogo's private office. A list of several of Wellsville's prominent citizens who have vaults on their properties was made up and it was decided that the vaults must be abandoned and the people compelled to connect their houses with the sanitary sewer. All of the people on the list will be notified to appear before the board Wednesday evening, December 3, for a hearing.

Dr. J. Howard Davis was present and amused the audience for a while with his dramatic anecdotes and recitations, which were highly appreciated, after which Supt. Gilliland announced the sale of boxes. It was interesting and amusing for the young men to hunt up the young ladies whose names appeared on the box which they purchased to eat supper with. In this way they reaped a handsome profit. Altogether it was a very pleasant and profitable social gathering.

News and Notes About The Potteries

HUMOROUS POTTERY.

Pottery does not lend itself to humorous treatment. People, however, who have even the least sense of humor, says an exchange, must admit that they cannot look at some of the recent samples of humorous pottery without smiling. The quaint-looking faces and snug smiles on some of the imported Dutch cats, chiefly in majolica or a kind of Rouen ware, are enough to make even the most sedate person smile. The more recent English examples of cats in the act of singing, after the style of some lady amateurs, although in majolica and variously, are quaint enough to cause ripples, if not roars, of laughter. One cat stands on its front, and sits on its hind legs and tail, while it looks at one serio-comically, with its head half-screwed around. There are cats posing in all manner of grotesque positions. These, when tied up with yellow ribbon, are enough to make a funeral mute's face broaden into a smile. How sedate, also appears a rabbit dressed up as a parson! How comically thoughtful is an earthenware monkey modeled as though in the act of solving some Darwinian problem or intricate sum! China monkeys in grotesque attitudes, dogs twisting and turning themselves almost inside out, dogs imitating human eccentricities, and other animals posing in strange and unfamiliar attitudes, until one wonders whether our modelers or their models are troubled with "a little bit off the top."

NARROW ESCAPE.

Misses Margaret Russell and Celia Gray, fillers-in in the decorating department at Cartwright's, had a narrow escape yesterday at noon from a horrible death or serious injury. They were compelled to cross the railroad track to get to the pottery, but were confronted by a freight train that blocked the crossing. Not caring to wait for it to move along they determined to cross the track beneath the cars. No sooner had they started than the train began to move. Terribly frightened they made all possible haste and succeeded in reaching the other side before the wheels reached them. After this they will wait until the trains have passed before attempting to cross the tracks.

WELL EXPECTED IN.

The oil well on the property of Peter McDevitt, the popular dipper at the Thompson, has been sunk to a depth of several hundred feet and it is expected to reach the producing sand either today or tomorrow. Mr. McDevitt and his many friends at the plant are anxiously awaiting the outcome. The property is surrounded with wells that are producing oil in paying quantities.

PIECE WORK NOW.

A change in the method of pay went into effect in the decorating department at Cartwright's Monday. Only transferring crews are effected. Heretofore they have been paid by the day, but under the new plan it will be all piece work. The prevailing scale of prices has been adopted and the new plan is proving much more satisfactory to the girls and the printers.

POPULAR WITH EMPLOYERS.

Miss Mary Maple, who was one of the brides today in the double wedding at Chester, has been assistant bookkeeper in the office at the Cartwright for several years, and has endeared herself to her employers by her sweet disposition and efficient service. They will part with her with the deepest regret.

FEUSTEL-BEAVER.

Frank Feustel, a presser, and Miss Ada Beaver, of the warehouse at Thompsons, are to be married Thanksgiving day. They will leave for Pittsburg on the morning of that day where the ceremony will be performed. They have the best wishes of their many friends at the plant.

NOTES OF THE POTTERS.

James Combs, of the glost end at the Thompson, is reported among the sick today.

Miss Ola Poland, of Cartwright's, is attending the double wedding at Chester today.

George Bloor has accepted a position at the Thompson and is finishing cups for John McDole.

Leonard Beatty, who has been operating the plate and saucer jigger at the Thompson, is now on the spittoon jigger.

Glade Coleman, of the packing department at the Thompson, returned to work again yesterday after a week's layoff occasioned by an injured hand.

Miss Susan Wilson, and her mother-in-law, Mrs. Jennie Wilson, will leave in a few days for Reedsville, where they will make their future home. The former has resigned her position at the Thompson.

had advocated illegal transactions.

"You, or the council let a contract to George Adam for street signs not long ago. The bids were opened, and a glaring irregularity was pointed out. This you called a technicality, and in spite of the efforts of Mr. Johnston and myself, no other explanation could be obtained. And there are other cases."

Still excited, Mr. Peach called upon the body to vindicate him, but Uncle Joe held to his point, and scored the Third ward member in plain and unmistakable language.

When the solicitor was called upon he gave as his opinion that inasmuch as no action for damages had been begun against the city, it would not be legal to voluntarily pay for the improvement, and it was dropped for the present.

Members Barlow, Bullock, Peach, Orr, Horwell, Nice and McConnell were present when the meeting was called to order, Thomas and Marshall arriving later. The builders' ordinance was the first matter up, and though everyone favored its passage, several members, with the mayor, thought it was not complete. The latter held there ought to be a clause placing a time limit in which the building under way should be completed. The ordinance was allowed to go on its second reading, and between now and the time it is up for final passage the clauses which are now lacking will be inserted.

The ordinance providing for money to pay for the improvement of Springdale street, was put on its second reading, and under suspension of the rules was finally passed.

Ravine street residents petitioned for a light on that thoroughfare and it was referred to the light committee.

Under the head of reports of committees it had been predicted that the railroad committee would enlighten the council and the public generally upon the plan mapped out by it in dealing with the Pennsylvania company, but strange to say, no report was forthcoming. It is known, however, that the committee had its work well in hand, and at the proper time the curious ones will be "put next."

President Nice desired a few reports from the committees appointed some time ago to look after the several departments of the city government. It developed that none of the committees had as yet got down to work. Mr. Nice urged that meetings be called at once and the task begun, as there were but a few weeks in which to complete it. The president recalled that two committees had been omitted, that of the sinking fund and the one to fix the salaries of the municipal offices. He did not fill these places, however, probably thinking it could be done at the next meeting.

The street committee had neglected to have constructed a pair of steps connecting Trentvale street and Edgewood addition. The work had been authorized several months ago, the lumber was on the ground, but no steps had been taken toward finishing up the work. Chairman Bullock, of the street committee, reported that his department had been given the impression that the work had been completed a long time ago.

An ordinance providing for the construction of a storm water sewer for 407 feet on Bradshaw avenue was brought up and read, but it was found that the work could not be started this fall, and the fact that the present conucil cannot make contracts to be carried out by bodies to be organized later, the measure killed itself.

The assessing ordinance for Trentvale street covering the collection of assessments upon that thoroughfare according to benefits, was placed on its final reading under suspension of the rules, and passed. Dr. Marshall supported the motion for a suspension of the rules, but voted against the adoption of the ordinance. Of the assessing ordinances on the three streets, Calcutta road, Trentvale street and Pennsylvania avenue, the two former have been passed. As soon as the equalizing board, now at work on Pennsylvania avenue, has finished its labors, it too, can be passed. The council will then be ready to adopt a bond issue proposition for the purpose of paying the city's share of the expense of improving these thoroughfares and will doubtless do so.

It was reported that Mrs. Ellen O'Connor, with a few other residents of Oblique street, were not satisfied with the grade which had been established there and wanted it changed. The engineer stated there had been an addition laid out since the street grade had been established, and that the owners of this plot had filled in the lots to a depth that did not correspond with the fixed grade. He did not see how the lines could be changed unless all the property owners on the street would petition council in the customary way.

A petition will be presented this week asking that an additional portion of Summit Lane be improved by paving. The city has now under way a section of the alley and provided the property owners waive all rights that alley, between Jackson and Jefferson, will be paved along with the rest.

On motion of McConnell the street commissioner was ordered to repair a flight of steps on Eighth street, near the Corns property.

Several pavements on the south side of Fifth street had been omitted from the list when the matter was taken up some time ago, and by motion the engineer was instructed to go ahead with the work of laying them at once.

It was the opinion of Engineer J. C. Kelly that the repairs could be made to Thomas Chadwick's property at a cost of $192.50, but no action was taken. Many of the members believe that it will cost the city much more than that amount if Mr. Chadwick decided to sue for damages. This mave is thought to be unevitable.

AGREEMENT REACHED.

Window Glass Manufacturers and Jobbers Settle on Terms.

Muncie, Ind., Nov. 26.—An agreement has been reached by the American Window Glass company, the Federation Window Glass company and the independent Window Glass company on one side, and the American Window Glass Jobbers' association on the other, whereby the jobbers agree to take of the window glass combination not less than 450,000 boxes of glass each month for six months, price to remain the same for the first two months and to be increased slightly each month thereafter, until the term of the contract shall expire.

The amount of increase each month is to be determined by future agreements between the jobbers and manufacturing companies. This monthly sale will not take up all the product of the factories, but will leave a large surplus in the hands of the manufacturers. The three window glass companies control 3,109 pots, but shortage of workmen and fuel prevents the operation of part of this capacity.

REALM OF SPORTS

ROVERS VS. ROCHESTER

The Big Game of Thanksgiving Day Will Be Played at West End Park.

The West End Rovers, one of the fastest rugby foot ball teams in northeastern Ohio, will play the Rochester second team tomorrow afternoon in West End park. Not until last evening did Manager Ashbaugh know that the game would be played in the West End. He had been given to understand that the grounds were taken, but John Walsh, manager of the park, notified him that the first team will have no game.

The West End Rovers average in weight about 135 pounds, and for their size they put up a game well worth witnessing. It is the wish of the team to get games with all local teams who come in their class and have announced that they will play for $50 or $100 a side. They state that they are over willing to meet the Oakland boys, but will not play for pleasure. Considering that there will be practically no other form of amusement afforded in the city tomorrow, it is expected that a large crowd will see Rochester and the Rovers take a tumble. The former team is not only a strong bunch, but it has an enviable record for the season, and the Rovers do not expect to win the game without putting forth every effort. Competent referees have been secured and the contest will be fought with vigor by both sides. The Rovers will lineup as follows:

Foot Ball Until January 1.

The season for association foot ball will be extended until at least the first of the year. The Rovers are preparing for quite a swing around the circuit where this sport thrives, and already have a prospect of four games, to be played during the week intervening between Christmas and New Year's. The exact dates have not been fixed, but the first game is to be played on Christmas day, probably with the McDonald team. They will visit Laurel Hill, Swissvale and Youngstown. The Rovers are confident of at least getting an even split on these games and hope to win a majority.

Music in Plenty.

There will be plenty of music for the Thanksgiving foot ball game in Salem when Salem will play Lisbon for the championship of the county. The services of the Quaker City band has already been secured. In addition to this the band of 20 pieces, which will be there on that day with the "Robinson Crusoe" show, will be on the field rooting for Salem. Lisbon will also have a band.

To Play With Yale.

The officials of the Yale baseball team have just completed their schedule for 1903, and in the list of games appears the name of the University of West Virginia. This game will be played at New Haven, May 13.

Newspaper Consolidation.

G. Ernest Koch, who has published the Columbiana Independent for some time, in the last issue of that paper states that it has been sold to Newell & Shingler, publishers of the Columbiana Leader. The purchaser will consolidate the two papers. Koch will remain in Columbiana and will conduct a job printing business exclusively.

Ridden From Severe Heart Trouble.

Pale, Weak and Constantly Tired.

Dr. Miles' Heart Cure Cured Me.

"I write to thank you for the cure I received from your remedies. When I began taking your medicine I was confined to my bed most of the time. Our best home doctors told me there was no cure for me on account of the weak condition of my heart. I was pale and weak, constantly tired, had no appetite and could not sleep. I was exceedingly nervous and easily irritated in consequence. At last I began taking as a last resort, Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure together with Dr. Miles' Wine of Sarsaparilla. I was helped from the start and I cannot say enough in praise of these wonderful remedies. I can truthfully say they are the best medicines I ever took. They cured me and I am now able to work on the farm every day. I gladly recommend your remedies to all sufferers."—Wm. B. Campbell, Mantorville, Minn.

"For years I could not turn my head to the right but it caused great pain in the back of my neck and it seemed at times my head would burst with pain. I would sometimes lie down, and could not get up without help my neck was so stiff. About once a week I would have to go to bed with a very severe headache. By using one of Dr. Miles' Nerve Plasters on my neck and occasionally using the Anti-Pain Pills, which always relieved the headache instantly, I completely overcame my trouble, and both headache and stiffness have disappeared."—Miss Lucy Billows, Cleveland, Ohio.

THE INDIANS' THANKSGIVING

THE interest in Thanksgiving day and its observance is just as intense these days among the reservation Indians as in college towns where great football games are scheduled to occur, says the New York Times. Especially is this true in the southwest, where the Indians have had an opportunity to become thoroughly civilized of late years. The white people find no more enjoyment in this day of universal good cheer than do these same dusky redskins.

It is a day of feasting, playing and gambling, with a big dance at night. Such sport only comes once a year to them nowadays, when they have had to forsake the scalping knife for the plow. Their wild nature rebelled at the idea of work, and it has been with much difficulty that the government agents have made farmers out of the young braves. A day of rest and amusement is considered good for their better nature, and the government authorities are willing that Thanksgiving day shall become a festal time for the reservation wards of the nation.

The Kiowas and Comanches, who have but recently been placed on allotments, will have forsaken many of their wild plans of amusement this Thanksgiving, owing to the fact that they have been cut off the free list of beef issues. They have arranged to draw grass money on Thanksgiving, and a goodly portion of this will be spent in purchasing food for a grand feast. At night they will take part in a green corn dance, at which prayers will be offered to the Great Spirit for the good crops which they have had the past season. The spirit of thankfulness pervades the Indian celebrations.

The Osages hold a big feast at Pawhuska, their capital city. All members of the tribe are invited to take part in the festivities. At the beginning and end of each meal—and there are many—the aged missionary who lives among them is invited to deliver a short prayer thanking the Great Spirit for the good things which the agent has sent to them. The food is cooked by the squaws, and, while it could be prepared in a much cleaner and more tasteful manner, the cooking is an improvement over that of a few years gone.

The Apaches and Cheyennes are in the habit of holding a pony smoke. Often the Osages indulge in this expensive festival. A pony smoke is a friendly meeting of two tribes and is especially appropriate for the occasion. The tribe giving the smoke is supposed to bear all of the expenses. They provide the best game and vegetables in the market for their guests, and at the end of the first day's meeting they present a good pony to the head of each family visiting them. As a tribe consists of from 300 to 500 families, the expenses soon mount high. The Osages, being the richest reservation Indians there are today, can better afford to hold pony smokes, and, combined with their feast day, they generally invite several hundred guests from the Poncas, Tonkawas and surrounding tribes. Those accepting the ponies are supposed to return the gift with equally expensive ones later on, but few of them can do so.

The Poncas hold every Thanksgiving as a beef issue day. If the agent does not come forward and present them with a herd of cattle for this occasion, they mortgage their property and buy cattle of some neighboring ranchmen. A beef issue is the most typical of the redskin and also the most picturesque of Indian Thanksgiving celebrations. For years the government has forbidden the issue of beef after the manner of an old time issue, but on special occasions they are allowed the amusement of killing their own meat. It is said by the government officers who succeeded in having the practice stopped that beef issue tends to make the Indian wilder and more difficult to civilize.

A hundred cattle are turned loose in a large pasture. The young men of the tribe are mounted on mustangs and have shining field guns. With the good wishes of the squaws and medicine men ringing in their ears they ride out to kill the cattle. The beasts have no chance for life whatever. The chase is accompanied by an undue amount of wild yelling, while excitement grows intense in the camp. The smell of fresh blood makes the squaws wild, as it were. After all of the cattle have been shot down then the killers give a signal which means that all of the tribe are at liberty to rush forth and secure their portion. A half beef is awarded to each squaw. The beef is cleaned and cooked on a fire on the open plain, while the medicine men dance their approval and the warriors sing in their glee. The feast follows, with more dancing, and the whole day is thus spent, ending late at night with a final gorge.

THANKSGIVING PROCLAMATIONS

Carefully preserved in the state department at Washington are all of the proclamations ever issued by the presidents of the United States. They are kept in large brown envelopes and carefully filed away in series for each year. Among them are the Thanksgiving proclamations issued by our presidents and include one dated Jan. 1, 1795, and signed by George Washington, while another bears the signature of James Madison.

The issuing of a Thanksgiving proclamation by the president of the United States is a more complicated affair than most people imagine. It is a serious duty for the president, for it is customary for him to write this proclamation with his own hand and to put into it as much of the spirit of the day as possible. President Harrison used to take a pencil and a little pad of paper and write out the proclamation in full. Then he would turn it over to one of the executive clerks to be copied. Mr. Harrison preferred to use his pencil rather than to dictate. President Cleveland also wrote some things with his own hand, but he used a stenographer, too, a great deal.

The president in writing a Thanksgiving proclamation makes a draft of what he wishes to say. Such a high official as he is cannot afford the time to make pretty copies of his letters. He simply scrawls what he thinks ought to be said, with corrections and amendments here and there, and after the wording has satisfied him he hands it over to a clerk to be copied in proper shape. In the state department there are two or three clerks who make a specialty of penmanship, and one of these engrosses the proclamation on parchment artistically, when it is sent back to the White House to receive the president's signature. Then the great seal of the state department is affixed. It is a very ornate seal. It ought to be, for it cost $1,000. It is kept in a rosewood case.

The affixing of this seal is a momentous affair. A warrant for it must have been previously obtained from and signed by the president. The proclamation having been made entirely formal and authentic by the addition of the seal, copies are taken of it by clerks, and one is sent to each of the states and territories, addressed to the governors.

The state department uses the typewriter for some purposes, but not for official correspondence. All of the copies of the proclamation are written out on the long sheets of blue paper which are used for official correspondence. Each governor who receives a copy of the president's proclamation will make a proclamation of his own. But in the meantime the proclamation of the president has been made public, and the people all over the country know what day has been chosen for Thanksgiving.

SPOILED HIS DINNER.

An Unpleasant Thanksgiving Day For a Politician.

"Bluest Thanksgiving I ever spent?" mused the fine old gentleman who has an unconquerable antipathy to practical politics. "It stands out in my memory like an obelisk on a plain, and it was not so very long ago, either.

"I had been induced that fall to run for an important public office. It was done against my better judgment and under great pressure, but when a man enters such a fight he wants to win. I was in a close district and determined to put up the very best fight that the circumstances would permit. I advertised at once for an extra stenographer, and from the many who responded selected a beautiful, bright and dashing young woman who justified my immediate faith in her ability. She did all my private correspondence, knew as much about the inside of the campaign as I did, worked day and night with a willingness that was surprising, and even took from one of my shrewdest advisers the list of voters in the strongest section with which I had to contend, with full instructions as to how the most influential persons among them could be won to my cause. It was great work, and yet I fell several hundred short of the normal party vote.

"My successful opponent lived in a neighboring town and graciously invited me to be his guest on the following Thanksgiving. It would have looked surly to refuse, and I went. It was really an admirable social function, but the few hours I put in there were torture. The host met me with a hearty handclasp. Turning, he said, 'My wife.' Resplendent in satin and jewels, I saw my stenographer. 'Love and war,' she murmured. 'He thinks I was visiting my old home in New England.' I held my peace, but that fatted turkey tasted like cork."—Detroit Free Press.

THE FIRST THANKSGIVING.

A Cotemporary Account of the Pioneer Feast In 1621.

The first Thanksgiving day was celebrated in the autumn of 1621.

An account of the pioneer of all these feasts has been presented in a letter by Edward Winslow written in the same year:

"You shall understand that in this little time that few of us have been here we have built seven dwelling houses and four for the use of the plantation and have made preparations for eleven others. We set the last spring some twenty acres of corn and sowed some six acres of barley and peas. Our corn did prove well, God be praised, and our barley indifferent good, but our peas not worth harvesting. Our harvest being got in, our governor sent four men out fowling, so that we might after a special manner rejoice together after we had gathered the fruit of our labors. They four in one day killed as much fowl as, with a little help beside, served the whole company almost a week, at which time among other recreations we exercised our arms, many of the Indians arriving among us, and among the rest their greatest king, Massasoit, with ninety men, whom for three days we entertained and feasted. And, although it be not always so plentiful as it was at this time with us, yet, by the goodness of God, we are so far from want that we often wish you partakers of our plenty."

Thus Thanksgiving was born.

It continued to be celebrated, though not with any regularity, for about sixty years, after which it was annually ordered by the general court, not always in November, but generally after the harvests were gathered.

An Ideal Woman's Medicine.

So says Mrs. Josie Irwin, of 325 So. College St., Nashville, Tenn., of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Never in the history of medicine has the demand for one particular remedy for female diseases equalled that attained by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and never during the lifetime of this wonderful medicine has the demand for it been so great as it is to-day.

From the Atlantic to the Pacific, and throughout the length and breadth of this great continent come the glad tidings of woman's sufferings relieved by it, and thousands upon thousands of letters are pouring in from grateful women saying that it will and positively does cure the worst forms of female complaints.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all women who are puzzled about their health to write her at Lynn, Mass., for advice. Such correspondence is seen by women only, and no charge is made.

THE GORE TRAGEDY.

American Doctors Tend Individually to Accident Theory.

Paris, Nov. 26.—In spite of the rigid secrecy which has been maintained by the officials and by the commission of American doctors concerning the result of the autopsy conducted by the latter on the body of Mrs. Ellen Gore, it is learned from an authoritative source that the doctors tend individually to the acceptance of the theory of an accident, and the probabilities are that their official report will strongly incline to that theory, if it does not positively assert it, thus bringing the French and American doctors into agreement and relieving the case of any international significance.

Consul General Gowdy continues to take the depositions of all witnesses. The Temps last night said that it was the activity displayed by the Russian colony on behalf of De Rydewski which stimulated the American officials into a counter activity on behalf of the late Mrs. Gore.

Farm Boiler Exploded.

Lebanon, Pa., Nov. 26.—A steam boiler on one of the dairy farms of G. Dawson Coleman, near here, exploded yesterday. The barn was set on fire and destroyed. Abraham Becker and Adam Ryle were badly burned. The live stock was saved.

JUST IN TIME

Down in Health and Strength—Nervous—Irritable—Ache All Over—A Depressed Condition Rapidly Changed.

Mr. B. L. Updegraff, of No. 169 Fifth street, East Liverpool, Ohio, says:—"As a general and nerve tonic I can recommend Dr. Chase's Nerve Pills I got at Larkins' Drug Store. I was at the time feeling run down and nervous—not up to the mark in health and needed a tonic. The medicine did its work nicely and I regained tone, strength and energy again."

THE NEW YORK STOCK MARKET.

Trading Moderately Light and Chiefly Professional—Bonds Heavy in Sympathy With Stocks.

New York, Nov. 26.—Trading, while not especially light, was chiefly professional. Many traders showed a disposition to keep out of the market pending the publication of President Roosevelt's annual message, in which important recommendations regarding trust and tariff legislation are looked for.

Foreign exchange advanced to the highest point yet reached in the present upward movement. Demand bills sold up to 487.40. The price soon declined 10 points, however, at which level most of the day's business was done.

Declines were general at the opening, New York Central, St. Paul, Union Pacific, Reading, Sugar and other active issues selling off more or less extensively. Heavy purchases of Reading around 61 attracted attention, but that stock was among the principal sufferers in the selling movement at the close. There were unimportant recoveries and the tone of the market at the close was steady. London traded in about 12,000 shares, half purchases and half sales.

Bonds showed heaviness in sympathy with stocks and Wabash debenture Bs developed exceptional weakness. Total sales, par value, $1,955,000.

United States 3s coupon, advanced ½ per cent on the last call.

STEAMER QUITO ASHORE.

No Lives Lost, but the Boat Is a Total Wreck.

Lorain, O., Nov. 26.—The steamer Quito, ore laden, from Escanaba to Cleveland, ran ashore while trying to make this port at 7 o'clock last night. A northeast gale prevailed at the time. The captain and 12 of the crew and the steward were rescued. Two engineers and two mates were left in the engine room. A boat sent to their rescue afterwards was able to get off but one of the mates, the other three remaining aboard, waiting for assistance which was sent from the Cleveland life saving station. The boat sprung a leak yesterday during the heavy wind, hence the endeavor to reach this port instead of going on to Cleveland.

At midnight the remaining three members of the boat's crew were taken off by the Cleveland life saving crew. The boat is pounding on the beach.

Mull's Grape Tonic Cures Constipation.

When the bowels move irregularly the entire bodily system must suffer. Constipation more frequently occurs among women and it manifests itself in provoking profuse leucorrhea and other serious female diseases. Regular bowels will result in a complete cure when you use Mull's Grape Tonic. Unlike pills and ordinary cathartics, this remedy is a mild, gentle laxative in addition to being a greater flesh-builder, blood-maker and strength-giver than cod liver oil or any other preparation recommended for that purpose. Mull's Grape Tonic will permanently cure the most obstinate case of constipation, and the numerous afflictions that invariably follow in its wake. No matter if it is piles, liver complaint, kidney disorder, vertigo, palpitation of the heart, diarrhea or the self-poisoning which follows when the undigested food remains in the bowels where it putrefies and empties highly diseased germs into the blood, such as typhoid and malaria, Mull's Grape Tonic will positively cure. Large sample bottle will be sent free to any address on receipt of 10 cents to cover postage, by the Lightning Medicine Co., Rock Island, Ill. Send name of your druggist. All druggists sell Mull's Grape Tonic at 50 cents a bottle.

RETURNS AS ONE FROM THE DEAD

John Meade Was Thought to Be Resting in a Grave at Wheeling.

MANGLED BODY WAS FOUND

And Identified As His—Now He Turns Up In Jail In Newport, Ky., And Relatives Will Have Him Released Promptly.

Concerning John Meade, whose case was exclusively reported in the News Review on Monday, a Cincinnati dispatch says:

John Meade, who was arrested two weeks ago under the name of John Montgomery by the Newport police, has been mourned as dead for four years by his relatives, who reside in Wheeling, W. Va. That truth is stranger than fiction is again exemplified in the story of the "resurrection" of Meade, a scion of a prominent West Virginia family. His father, Colonel C. A. Meade, who died about a year ago, was mine inspector under Governor Atkinson and a well known politician.

His son John ran away from home five years ago, owing to some difficulty he had with his parents. Nothing more was heard from him until a year later, when a man answering his description was killed in a railroad wreck outside of Wheeling. The body was cut to pieces, but as the remains bore certain striking resemblances to John Meade, and the family was notified. Meade, Sr., identified the remains as those of his son and they were buried in the family vault.

About two weeks ago two young men were arrested by the Newport police. One of them, who gave the name of Shannon, was caught in the act of touching Motorman Kruse, of the C. N. & C. Street railway. The other man gave the name of John Montgomery. Both were tried for disorderly conduct and fined $25 and costs and sentenced to 10 days in jail. Having no money, they were remanded to the Newport jail to serve out the fine and sentence.

Montgomery, after languishing a few days, asked of Jailer Ploeger some paper, stating that he desired to write a letter to his relatives in Wheeling. He was given the paper and other writing materials and he indicted a letter to his brother asking him to send him $10.

Early yesterday morning Sergeant Gastreich, of the Newport police, was summoned to answer a telephone call from Wheeling, W. Va. The gentleman at the other end of the wire asked the sergeant if there was any one in the jail by the name of Meade or Montgomery.

He was told of the Montgomery case, and the young man was taken out of the cell and brought to the 'phone. The two began a conversation, and it was but a few minutes until the man at the other end recognized his brother, who was supposed to have been dead for four years.

The brother made arrangements to come to Newport, and will arrive today to pay the unexpired fine and take his brother home, where he will be received with open arms by a loving mother and five sisters.

Cleveland Accepts Invitation.

Philadelphia, Nov. 26.—Former President Grover Cleveland has accepted an invitation to preside at a public meeting to be held here on Dec. 11 in the interests of the Berean manual training and industrial school for colored people. Mr. Cleveland will make an address. Among the other speakers will be former Postmaster General Charles Emory Smith, Colonel A. K. McClure and Booker T. Washington.

Philadelphian Society.

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 26.—The Philadelphian society will hold commemorative exercises here on Dec. 6, to celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary of the formation of the American and Canadian Student Young Men's Christian association movement, which originated in Princeton in 1877. Representatives from nearly all of the student associations in the United States and Canada will be present.

Non-Union Barber Shot.

Wellston, O., Nov. 26.—Adam McClung, an old resident barber of Wellston, lies at the hospital at the point of death as the result of three bullet wounds inflicted by David Wills, secretary of the Jackson County Barbers' union. The trouble arose in Kuebler's barber shop. McClung is not a member of the union and had been employed there during the week

It leads—the News Review.

There is praise among the people, there is song in burg and town,
For another year of plenty, pride and honor and renown;
And it's time the eery eagle
That we happened to inveigle
For a banner bird should fold his wings and pray.
But he can't. I'll tell you why—
In an hour he has to die,
For the eagle is a turkey today.

There are days of bitter battle, days of pride in deed and man,
When we love to hear the eagle scream as loudly as he can;
When the eagle of the mountain
And his mold on tomb and fountain
Have a chance to flap their wings and have their say.
But the emblem and the power
Are abolished for an hour,
For the eagle is a turkey today.

Where he wore a feather collar he has donned a fringe of dye,
And a pink and purple wattle droops across his eagle eye;
And his heaven reaching pinions
Trail the ground among the minions
Of the barnyard and the coop and country way,
While he bids his friends goodby
Ere he lays him down to die,
For the eagle is a turkey today.

Oh, I would not dim or tarnish aught of glory I have heard
Of our good old Uncle Sammy or the glory of his bird;
But when block and ax inveigle
To decapitate the eagle
Then I wonder why we let them have their way,
Till I learn the reason why—
Once a year the bird must die,
For the eagle is a turkey that day.

A Matter That Will Doubtless Be Brought to New Safety Board's Attention.

The board of public safety, after completing the work absolutely necessary for the running of the city's affairs, will no doubt be swamped with requests and suggestions by people who have fed on hope for years and who will feel that the time has arrived for action or consideration in their case.

For several months after entering upon their duties the board will experience a time not to be envied. Protests which have been hanging fire for years will be in evidence, and all that the board will be able to do will be to promise action at an early date. Among the numerous requests that will be made of the honorable body, one in particular is being talked of at the present time.

Every resident of the city who has ever had occasion to transact business of any kind at the city hall knows without being told that East Liverpool is and has been for years badly in need of a more complete building. It is said that there is not a city of its size in the state that is not provided with a larger city building, better equipped and in every way more satisfactory. And it is an undisputed fact that there are many cities in the state less than half as large that have city halls which would be a credit to this municipality.

Although it is assured that the board will sooner or later be called upon to have the desired building erected, it is probable that it will be approached gently, in consideration of the fact that the board may look upon the question as one too stupenduous for immediate action. The first step toward its erection, if the board honors the request, will be to have built adjacent to the present hall, a vault that can be utilized by all of the city officials in storing for protection the valuables in their possession.

Were a fire to rage in the building at the present time the city would undoubtedly lose several thousand dollars worth of documents. In the city engineer's office there are plans and specifications of value impossible to estimate; in the city clerk's office records invaluable lie and in the mayor's office dockets covering crimes for years back. In the three offices the paraphernalia is simply under lock and key, which practically means that nothing is protected. Mayor Davidson said yesterday that something must be done and speedily if it be the desire of the board to have the city's property under protection.

Miss Fay Lee.

"Your booklet came to my home like a message of health when I had suffered with headache, backache and bearing-down pains. I was weak, nervous and hysterical and had not consulted any doctor, thinking it would pass away in time, but instead I found that the pains increased and were more frequent. I decided to try Wine of Cardui and in a short time was much improved. It seemed to act like a charm. I kept up the treatment and the result was most satisfactory. Words fail to express my gratitude for the suffering that is now saved me. I am in fine health, physically and mentally. I can only say 'thank you', but there is much more in my heart for you."

BEARING-DOWN pains are the worst that women know. If you are suffering from this trouble you need not be uncertain about it. The pains in the abdomen and back that feel as if heavy weights were pulling down on the nerves of the stomach are "bearing-down pains". They may not be particularly severe at present but they are growing worse. That headache which nearly drives you distracted now is caused by the terrible nervous tension. The nerves soon begin to give way under the strain. You perhaps jump at any unusual disturbance, or laugh or weep, hysterically, at no apparent cause. That is what Miss Fay Lee, 603½ North Seventh Street, Kansas City, Kansas, was coming to when she rescued herself by taking Wine of Cardui. The Wine made her a strong, healthy woman again, as it has made a million other women strong and healthy. By inducing regular menstruation the entire system is relieved of the terrible wasting drains. The ligaments which hold the womb in place are strengthened by a healthy flow and that organ is returned to its normal position. Returning health is the result. This is what Wine of Cardui has done for thousands of the best women in America.

If you need advice write The Ladies' Advisory Department, The Chattanooga Medicine Company, Chattanooga, Tenn., describing all your symptoms freely, and a letter of advice will be sent you. Secure a $1.00 bottle of Wine of Cardui from your druggist to-day.

A THANKFUL THANKSGIVING

"I DON'T feel as if I should enjoy this Thanksgivin'," said Mrs. Joel Nisbett, looking down into the basket of glossy, red checked Spitzenbergs as if it were a family vault and taking up an apple as if it had been a skull; "no, I don't."

"Then, Sarepta," observed her husband, who had just thrown a huge log on the open fire, "you don't disarn nothin' to be thankful for! It's as harnsome a turkey as ever flapped, and I don't know of a year when I've had nicer pumpkins on that ar' corn lot!"

"'Tain't turkey or pumpkin pies or cranberry sass as makes Thanksgivin'," signed Mrs. Nisbett.

"What is it, then? Ef it's cold weather, I should ha' thought the last frost would ha' done the business for you pretty fairly. Them artemisias by the front door is scorched black, and the old maple is losin' its leaves as if they

"I AM GOING TO BE MARRIED."

was rainin' down. Parson Jarvis is comin' all the way from Sloatesville to preach tomorrow, and the quire's larned a bran' new anthem just a-purpose, about bein' thankful for harvest and all that sort of thing. I'm sure I don't know what else you'd have."

Mrs. Nisbett only answered by a sigh.

"I wonder if 'tain't possible Stephe 'll be hum tonight," she said after a pause.

"He writ not. He thought he'd drop in arly tomorrow mornin' if he caught the train he expected. Only think, old woman; it's five years since Stephe was hum to Thanksgivin'!"

Old Nisbett rubbed his horny hands, with a chuckle, adding:

"And I s'pose, if all accounts is true, he's gettin' to be a great man out in that western country. It was kind of a hard pull when he went off and left us, but maybe the boy was in the right."

"Yes," said Mrs. Nisbett dolorously, "but somehow I can't get reconciled to the idea of his marryin' a strange gal out there."

Joel scratched his head. This was a phase of the subject that he scarcely felt competent to discuss.

"Maybe you'll like her. Stephen says she's a nice gal."

"Stephen says! As if a man over head and ears in love wouldn't say anything."

"I wish he'd told us who she was."

Mrs. Nisbett groaned again. Joel went out to the woodpile, the everyday shrine whence he generally derived what little of philosophic inspiration he had.

"Mrs. Nisbett!"

It was a soft little voice, and the old lady's face relaxed instinctively as it sounded on her ears.

"Why, Lida Tremaine—'tain't you!"

"It is. I've done everything that Aunt Constance wanted, and now I've just run over to see if you don't need a bit of help."

She stood in the doorway, a fair little apparition, all flushed and rosy with the November wind, while her blue eyes sparkled as if they were twin sapphires hidden away under her long, dark lashes. She was neither blond nor brunette, but a fresh cheeked girl, with nut brown hair, skin like the leaf of a damask rose, a straight, refined nose and lips as ripe as a red crabapple, though by no means so sour. Generally she had a demure sort of gravity lingering about her face, but when she did laugh a dimple came out upon her cheek and a row of pearly teeth glimmered instantaneously.

In one hand she carried a bunch of late autumn flowers.

"See!" she cried, holding them up. "I ransacked Aunt Constance's garden for these. I knew that big vase on the mantel needed something, and, with a branch or so of scarlet leaves, I'll have a royal bouquet to help you keep Thanksgiving."

Mrs. Nisbett took the fair oval face between her two hands and kissed the fresh little mouth.

"Set down, Lida," she said. "I wasn't a-calculatin' to have no sech fixin's up, but you've sech a way, child, I can't never say no to you."

"But you're going to keep Thanksgiving," cried Lida, throwing off her outer wrappings and dancing up to the looking glass like a little gale of wind, "because you invited Aunt Constance and me to dinner and because your son is coming home."

"Yes, child, yes," said Mrs. Nisbett, subsiding once more into the mournful key from which Lida's sudden appearance had momentarily aroused her. "Joel's got the turkey shut up in a coop, and the bakin' 's done, and I'm just a-fixin' them apples, and"—

"Oh, oh," cried Lida, who had fluttered to the window, "what glorious red leaves speckled over with little drops of gold! May I make some wreaths for the wall? Oh, please say yes!"

Mrs. Nisbett said "yes"—it would have been hard work to say "no" to Lida—and the girl soon came in, her apron full of the sprigs of the old maple tree, whose shadowy boughs kept the window veiled with cool shadows through the glaring summer days and showered fading gold upon the dead grass when the autumn came.

Mrs. Nisbett looked with tenderness upon the graceful little figure seated on the hearth rug, when the shine of the high heaped logs lost itself in her bright hair and made sparkles in her eyes, as the wreaths and trails of autumn leaves grew rapidly beneath her deft fingers.

"Lida," she said softly, "Lida, my dear!" Lida looked up.

"I saw your Aunt Constance yesterday, but there's somethin' reserved about her, and I didn't like to ask about you—whether you had decided to go out as a governess or not; because, my dear, Joel and I were talkin' last night, and we both thought what a comfort it would be to have you here."

"To have me here?"

"We're old and we're alone, and somehow we've both took a fancy to you, my child. So when your Aunt Constance goes back to the city, if you choose to come here"—

Mrs. Nisbett paused abruptly and burst into tears.

"We had a little girl once, my dear, and if she'd lived she would ha' been nigh about your age."

Lida let the leaves drop down on the floor as she sprang up and threw both arms round the old woman's neck.

"Oh, Mrs. Nisbett," she whispered softly, "you are so very, very kind. Believe me, I appreciate it all, but—but—I hardly know how to tell you."

Mrs. Nisbett listened intently. Lida smiled and cried a little and then whispered so low it was scarcely audible.

"I am going to be married."

"Married!" ejaculated Mrs. Nisbett, with all a woman's interest in this important piece of information. "And who to?"

"Your son lives in Iowa—in Parlington?"

"Yes."

"Well, did he ever mention the name of"—

Lida paused, her cheeks glowing roses. Old Nisbett had come in with an armful of wood, bringing a gale with him from the frosty outer world.

"I'll tell you by and by," whispered Lida as she went back to her work.

"Joel 'll go out again arter awhile," thought Mrs. Nisbett, "and then I'll hear about Lida's beau."

But Joel sat down before the fire with a complacent satisfaction which boded ill for the gratification of his wife's curiosity, and finally accompanied Lida home, thus frustrating all his wife's designs and cutting off her chance of hearing Lida's story.

"Dear me!" thought she. "I don't believe the man was ever born who knowed when he wasn't wanted! How lonesome it seems when Lida's gone! What does the girl want to get married for when I could ha' took such a sight o' comfort with her? Oh, dear, dear! It does seem as if the world was all askew!"

The next day, in spite of the weather prophet's prediction of snow, dawned clear and brilliant as the dying smile of Indian summer. By 11 o'clock Mrs. Nisbett was dressed in her best silk and cap, with the turkey browning beautifully in the oven and the cranberry tarts doing credit to themselves as well as to their maker, the table set, the fire high heaped with crackling logs and the plates dressed with coronals of autumn leaves. Aunt Constance, a tall, prim maiden lady of uncertain age, stood before the bedroom looking glass arranging her coiffure. Lida, in a blue dress with a late autumn rose in her hair, was tripping hither and thither as light footed and helpful as half a dozen household fairies merged into one, while Mrs. Nisbett stood regarding her with a loving eye, murmuring to herself:

"Well, well, it seems like it was the Lord's will to deny us of just what we most want, but if I had a daughter I could wish she was like Lida."

As the old kitchen clock struck 1 Mrs. Nisbett, looking from the window, gave a little cry.

"There he comes—there comes Joel, and, as I live, there's the boy with him!"

Lida ran into the bedroom.

When she returned, Mrs. Nisbett was clasped in the arms of a tall, handsome man of four or five and twenty.

"Lida," said the proud matron, striving to disengage herself from the affectionate clasp, "this is my son Stephen, and—why, what's the matter?"

For Stephen had dropped her hands with an exclamation of surprise and amazement, and Lida stood there glowing crimson.

"Lida! Why, mother, this is a surprise indeed that you have prepared for me!"

"I prepared!" echoed the astonished old lady. "Well, that's a good un, when I'm ten times as much surprised as you be! Lida, what does this mean?"

"It means," said Lida, with a demure smile—she was beginning to recover her scattered self possession—"it means that this is the gentleman I am to be married to!"

"Stephen!" cried Mrs. Nisbett, "is Lida to be your wife?"

"She has given me her promise to that effect, at least," said Stephen, looking proudly down upon his lovely little fiancee.

"Well, if it don't beat all how queer things do happen!" said Mrs. Nisbett, her face radiant. "And you've been livin' neighbor to me these six weeks and I never knowed it. Lida, why didn't you tell me?"

"Because I never dreamed that Stephen Risingham, my betrothed western lover, was anything to Mrs. Nisbett," said Lida, laughing.

"There 'tis, now!" ejaculated the farmer. "How was she to know that he was only my nephew, adopted when his parents died, twenty good years ago. We've always called him son, and he's always been a son to us. But Lida didn't know. Old woman, what do you say to Stephen's wife?"

Mrs. Nisbett clasped Lida to her heart.

"I do say," she ejaculated, "this is the thankfullest Thanksgivin' I ever lived to see!"—New York Daily News.

"THANKSGIVING day ten or twelve years ago," said a tanned and weather-bronzed Sandy Hook pilot, "was altogether the most exciting twenty-four hours of my life, though it promised to be dull enough in the morning. It was before the New York pilots had combined with us and built the steam pilotboat New York, and we used to cruise about for vessels in small schooners.

"Such a cruise in a pilotboat would be tiresome to any one at any time; just then it was doubly so to me. For a couple of years I had been mightily interested in a good looking young woman. So far as I could see, the interest was mutual, and I had long had in mind suggesting to her a voyage on the sea of matrimony, with myself as pilot. I hadn't done it before because the girl's parents didn't seem to take kindly to a seafaring son-in-law. They allowed me to call upon their daughter once in awhile, but the air about the house when I was there made me think of storms till one evening early in November, just before I went out on this cruise. That evening, to my surprise, the mother invited me to eat Thanksgiving dinner with the family.

"There was a look in the girl's eyes that made me take courage when the mother gave the invitation, and I determined to settle the whole question on Thanksgiving day. The moral certainty of settling it the way I wished made me so happy at the beginning of the cruise that my pilot mates all noticed it. Our boat carried seven pilots, and I was fifth on the list, but I never dreamed there would be any trouble getting a ship in time to be ashore for Thanksgiving dinner.

He said he was going to furnish green turtle soup.

"We had bad luck from the beginning. On the second day out there was a big blow, and we had to run before the wind to save ourselves. It was three or four days, and we were 400 miles offshore at least, away out of the track of incoming vessels, before we dared put about. It was a full week before we were in position to look for ships, and even then we remained unlucky. There were plenty of ships coming in, but somehow they had nearly all picked up pilots before we sighted them. At the end of the second week only two of our men had left us. I was then third on the list, but I didn't worry as yet. By the day before Thanksgiving I was as sour as a spoiled pudding, and I couldn't crack a smile to save me. That afternoon two more of my mates got ships, so that I was next man to go, but as we were quite 200 miles out there wasn't a ghost of a show for me to get ashore in time for the dinner, even if I got a vessel early the next morning.

"Curiously enough, I felt a little better after I knew that I couldn't keep my engagement, and I began to take a lively interest in the steward's preparations for a Thanksgiving dinner at sea. He was a good cook and always prided himself on giving us something extra on holidays. This time he said he was going to furnish real green turtle soup to begin with and all the genuine Thanksgiving fixtures to follow.

"But just after midnight on Thanksgiving morning the sea suddenly stirred itself up rather worse than I have ever seen it before or since. In fact, our boat pitched so badly that we all awoke and couldn't go to sleep again.

"'Sail ahead! Full rigged ship on the weather bow!'

"That was my chance. I'd have preferred a steamer to a sailing vessel, of course, for there was no telling how long it would require to take a windjammer in. The signals showed that a pilot was wanted, and the crew made ready to put a small boat overboard.

"Just as the oarsmen were carefully working up toward the big vessel so that I could grasp the swinging ladder and climb on board a big wave came along and dashed the boat against the ship's side. In an instant the boat was crushed like an eggshell and we were all in the water. I thought I was going straight to Davy Jones, and I swallowed about a barrel of brine. Suddenly I came to the surface. A line had been thrown and was just in front of me. I grasped it and was hauled aboard more dead than alive.

"I took the ship in all right in spite of my mishap, and when I got to New York found the girl's father waiting at the pilots' office for news of me. Then I knew what the answer to my delayed question would be. It hadn't been a bad Thanksgiving after all."

BILL'S THANKSGIVING DINNER

He was called "Bill the Eater" in the east, in the west was known as "the man with the appetite," and the north and south agreed that "Hungry Bill" was a name that fitted him down to the ground. Bill cared very little, however, what he was called so long as he got a call to dinner occasionally. On his tramps through the country he had eaten at many a farmer's table, but on only one occasion had his appetite been satisfied. As he was sitting down to the table with a family one day the house took fire, and there was a rush for outdoors—that is, all fled except Bill. It was the opportunity of his life. He realized it, and when he was carried from the burning building an hour later half suffocated and with hair and whiskers burned off he had no complaint to make. For once in his life he had eaten what he called a square meal.

As a rule Bill avoided the large cities, but he always made it a point to be in one of them on Thanksgiving in order to take advantage of the free dinners usually provided for the poor. Year before last he ate his turkey in Boston, but last year he decided to feast in New York. Bill was seated in City Hall park when Charity came along and invited him to a free Thanksgiving dinner, and he was fit and ready to eat the meal of his life. He did not accept the invitation with undue haste, however, and thus give himself away. He permitted himself to be urged a little and conveyed the impression that one helping would fill him up and send him away to make room for another.

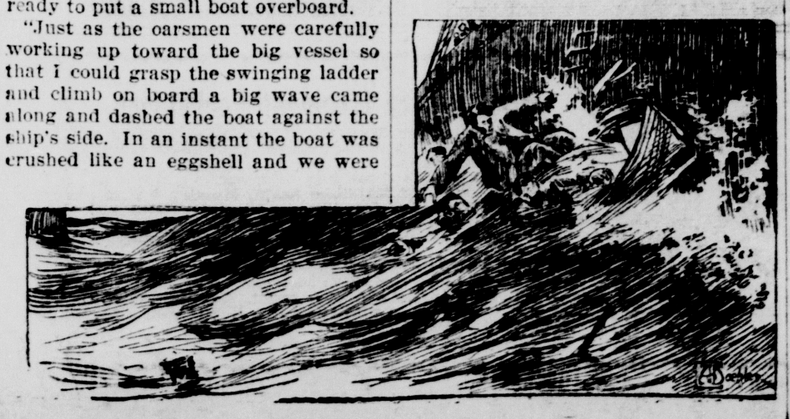

It was 1 o'clock in the afternoon when the festive board and the unfestive Bill squared off at each other. If Charity expected him to rush things, then Charity was disappointed. He had all the time there was, and he was aware that Thanksgiving only comes once a year. When urged to eat all he wanted, he replied that he would pick a bone or two, thank you, and merely toyed with the food before him. At 2 o'clock, however, Bill was still there, and as he began to strike his gait there were some whispered remarks about the danger of overeating. At 3 o'clock the tramp had taken the edge off his appetite, and at 4 he was eating in earnest.

Then a mild attempt was made to choke him off or to get him to choke himself to death, but Bill had decided to have some dinner. At 5 o'clock it was necessary to close the hall. The idea was to close Bill and the hall simultaneously, but he said he had dropped in to get a mouthful to eat, and they gave him half an hour's grace. He wanted more, but the committee was firm, even drawing him away from the board and escorting him to the door. Then, as Bill looked back with longing eyes at a mince pie he had been obliged to leave behind, he sighed and observed:

"I was told that this was to be a Thanksgiving spread to make us all thankful. I was given to understand there would be something to eat and drink and that no one would be turned away hungry. It is needless to say that I believe you acted from proper motives, but you can see for yourselves that you have made a sad failure of it. I will now walk up Fifth avenue and try to beg enough food to keep me from starving. Good day to you! I'll see you again next Thanksgiving."

"Not if I see you first!" replied Charity when she could get her breath.

Of the City Council, Wilkesbarre, Pa., Cured of Rheumatism.

Col. Wm. J. Harvey, a president of Wilkesbarre's city council, who will long be remembered for his great work for the city, was once a mere physical wreck, torn in every muscle and nerve from the frightful pains caused by rheumatism. He consulted the best physicians, went abroad, took mud baths, and almost every known treatment for the disease. A friend had had a very similar experience and Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy had cured him, so he recommended this great kidney medicine to Col. Harvey and he is to-day a well man, hale and hearty. He writes straight to the point:

DR. DAVID KENNEDY,

Dear Sir:—This is to certify that I was permanently cured of rheumatism by the use of Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy.

WM. J. HARVEY.

Rheumatism is but another name for uric acid poisoning which is caused primarily by diseased kidneys. Cure your kidneys and the rheumatism disappears.

For all diseases of the kidneys, liver, bladder and blood, rheumatism, dyspepsia and chronic constipation, as well as sicknesses peculiar to women, Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy is unquestionably the greatest medicine known to the medical profession.

C. Neaville, the well known and popular druggist of Pittsboro, Ind. "I recommend this remedy and guarantee it to be without an equal for coughs and colds, also as a preventitive and cure for croup." REFUSED INTERVIEW.

Mr. Mitchell and His Associates Denied Hearing By Anthracite Coal Road Men.

Coal Strike Troubles Will Now Go Back to Commission for Settlement. Arbitrators Will Resume Hearing of the Case Next Tuesday.

Washington, Nov. 26.—All prospects for an understanding between the United Mine Workers and the coal operators, outside the anthracite coal strike commission, came to a sudden termination late yesterday afternoon, through the receipt of a dispatch to Mr. Wayne MacVeagh, representing the Pennsylvania Coal company and the Hillside Coal and Iron company, notifying him that at a meeting of the anthracite coal road men in New York yesterday it had been decided not to grant an interview to Mr. Mitchell and his associates, which had been suggested for Friday next. The announcement, coming as it did after an all-day conference in this city between Mr. MacVeagh and Mr. Mitchell and his associates, attended part of the time by Carroll D. Wright, in an endeavor to adjust some details of the proposed agreement between the operators and miners, completely surprised everyone here. From a reliable source it is learned that the proposition that the operators meet Mr. Mitchell on Friday next was made at the instance of Mr. MacVeagh, who was no less surprised than Mr. Mitchell himself at the turn affairs took yesterday. From statements made by Mr. Darrow early in the day the impression had spread that a complete agreement would be effected at yesterday's conference, but when the meeting broke up Mr. Darrow read to the newspaper men in the corridor outside his room in Willard's hotel a statement which made it clear that no final agreement had been reached and that no further conferences were likely. The statement was as follows:

"The conference today was simply a continuation of the conferences held at Scranton and with precisely the same object—that of trying to reach a basis of hopeful discussion for an amicable settlement. Mr. MacVeagh has not been in Scranton since Thursday and some matters developed as to which further conference might be useful before either the operators or the representatives of the miners approach the serious task of formulating a definite agreement for their signatures."

Mr. Mitchell, when shown the dispatch from New York telling of the action of the operators, simply smiled and said that he had not asked for the conference, but that when it was suggested to him if it would be agreeable to meet the operators he said it would. Mr. Darrow and Mr. Lloyd, however, were outspoken regarding the action of the operators. Mr. Darrow said that it was now "up to the operators" and that he would return at once to Scranton, and on Tuesday next would appear before the committee, ready to go on with the hearing. Mr. Lloyd, holding in his hand the Associated Press dispatch, referred to the fact that Friday's conference had been suggested in order to adjust some matters on which there was still some disagreement. "Yet," said Mr. Lloyd, "these same men, who only last week wired the commission their assent to the general provisions of the tentative agreement and upon the strength of which the commission adjourned for a week in order to give the parties time to get together, now go completely back on their former action and call it all off. We are satisfied to go before the commission and continue the hearing." Messrs. Mitchell, Darrow and Lloyd left here at 6:50 over the Pennsylvania railroad for Scranton.

Scranton, Nov. 26.—The independent operators' committee, on their return from New York last night, were all gladness and smiles.

"We have won our point," said Dr. J. M. Rice, of the Riverside Coal company. "We are ready to show to the public that we are paying all the wages our business warrants and that an agreement with John Mitchell's organization is undesirable because of its un-American ideas. The big companies have come to our way of thinking and a settlement 'out of court' is no longer a possibility." Other members of the committee spoke in a similar strain.

As viewed from this point the hearings will be proceeded with on Dec. 3 as if the recess of the commission was nothing more than an adjournment to give the interested parties an opportunity to spend Thanksgiving at home.

ENORMOUS RAILROAD FIGURES.

Preliminary Report of Interstate Commerce Commission Shows Increased Earnings.

Washington, Nov. 26.—The preliminary report of the interstate commerce commission on the income account of railways in the United States for the year ended June 20, last, contains returns of railway companies operating 195,945 miles of line, or probably 98 per cent of the total railway mileage of the United States. The passenger earnings of these railways were $472,429,165, and the freight earnings $1,200,884,603. Including these and other earnings from operation, gross earnings amounted to $1,744,754,200, or $8,736 per mile of line, and operating expenses, $1,106,137,405, or $5,645 per mile of line, showing that net earnings were $605,616,795, or $3,091 per mile. The net earnings were $51,395,421 greater than during the previous year.

The total income of the operating roads of the country, including $82,714,492 derived from investments and miscellaneous sources, was $688,331,287. The deductions from income aggregated $458,459,961. This amount comprised interest on funded debt, rent of leased lines, betterments charged to income, taxes ($49,426,675) and various minor expenditures. The dividends declared on stocks amounted to $150,685,959, substantially $29,834,690 greater than for the previous year. The surplus from the operations of the roads was $79,185,367. The complete report of the previous year gave a surplus of $84,764,782. As this report relates to operating roads only, it does not include dividends paid by leased lines from the income they receive as rental.

MISTRESS DOROTHY TREDWELL was a very angry old lady and looked it. Red spots glowed in her cheeks, that usually were nearly as white as her silvery hair, her thin lips were drawn in a pale straight line, and her eyes flashed fire, yet pride and conscious obligation to ancestry, breeding and social position forbade sacrifice of her dignity by free expression of her feeling.

"So," she said, with painful suppression of her wrath, "your wish to spend the day with Mary Wallace was a deliberate falsehood, uttered for betrayal of my confidence, to make opportunity for your doing this shameful thing!"

"It is not a shameful thing for a girl to marry the man she loves," protested the handsome, tearful young woman kneeling before her. "I did not want to deceive you, but you made me do so, you were so unreasonable and unsympathetic."

"Unreasonable because I knew best what was for your good; unsympathetic because I did not want my child to throw herself away on a nobody."

"Pardon me, Mistress Tredwell," spoke up a tall, good looking young man who had until now kept silent in the background since his introduction by Priscilla as my "husband, Nathan Gordon." And, though the lady quite ignored him, he continued, "The Gordons are as old and good a family as the Tredwells, and I'm sure I have brought no disgrace on the name."

She suffered mentally as never before.

Priscilla resumed: "You wanted me to marry Abner Parker, though I told you I hated him, and forbade my even seeing Nathan, whom I loved. Don't be unkind, mother, dear. I love you none the less for loving Nathan. You married the man of your choice, and I have done the same; that is all. Will you not forgive me?"

"No, I will not. Go your ways and let me see you no more. As you have made your bed, so you shall lie. Priscilla Tredwell is no more for me, and I do not wish to know Mistress Nathan Gordon."

"Come, wife," said the young man, with a touch of brusqueness in his manner. "Demean yourself no more. We are only wasting time here. We will be happy despite her." And, masterfully drawing her arm within his, he led her out, with no backward look or word of farewell.

"Oh, Sister Dorothy," wailed a quavering voice as a woman several years older than Mistress Tredwell came from the dark corner where she had been silently weeping, "we'll never see Priscilla any more! And she was the last. How can we two old women keep Thanksgiving alone tomorrow?"

"Sister Sally, don't be a fool!" snapped Dorothy.

Truly it was a mockery of a Thanksgiving dinner to which the old ladies sat down the next day. A heavy snowstorm during the preceding night served as an excuse for Mistress Tredwell remaining home from church service.

The almost round table bore substantial and dainty viands enough to feed a dozen, but the two old women sat down to it alone. They bowed their heads while Mistress Dorothy said grace, inaudibly and briefly. Then Jane, the "hired help," brought in the soup.

"Oh, Sister Dorothy," exclaimed Sally tearfully, "I can't eat! I don't see how you can have the heart to, I'm sure I don't."

"Sally, don't be a fool," retorted Dorothy sharply. But that habitual injunction for once failed of its usually repressive effect upon Sally's demonstrations of emotion.

"I don't care what you say now, Dorothy. I just must speak. I'm heartbroken. Five years ago there were four leaves more in this table. Reuben was with us then, dear boy! Oh, God knows where he is now! And so was Rebecca—and, oh, the house has never been the same since she went away!"

Mistress Tredwell, with a fine affectation of placid unconcern, went on taking her soup, but the hand that held the spoon would tremble.

Sally went on: "You set your face like a flint against Reuben marrying the girl he loved, and she was as good a girl as ever was, only you must needs try to compel him to take another. Manlike, he did as he was a mind to, and you lost him. Only three extra leaves were wanted in the table the next two Thanksgivings. Then the same thing happened with Rebecca. You tried to make her marry David Purcell, who hadn't a thing but his money to recommend him, and, having, like you, an iron will that would rather break than bend, she went off, and you've never heard of her since."

"You have," interrupted Dorothy, with a sudden flush of color and a flash in her eyes.

"Yes, thank God, I have! The dear girl has written to me again and again, but she made me promise on the Bible that I'd never tell you a word about her until you asked, and have you ever asked?"

Dorothy closed her lips tightly.

"No, you haven't, and for all you know she may have starved or gone wrong."

"And I do not ask now," firmly replied the obdurate mother.

"Then two extra leaves were more than enough, for only Priscilla was left. And now she's gone. Oh, you unhappy woman, can you not see that because they are your children you cannot drive them?"

"May I help you to some of the turkey?"

"No, Dorothy; I can't eat!" cried Sally, bursting into tears and making a precipitate retreat from the table.

Mistress Tredwell kept her seat, took a slice of the turkey's breast, helped herself to the cranberry jelly and nibbled a stalk of celery, but her eating was only a pretense—pride's bluff against loneliness and misery. For a long time she sat motionless, staring at vacancy until her eyes filled with tears, which she dashed angrily away, as if ashamed of them.

Two Thanksgivings went by upon which there was no commemorative dinner in the Tredwell mansion, and a third dawned with no happier promise. As upon the morning after Priscilla achieved her independence, the ground was covered deeply by new fallen snow, but this time it did not prevent Mistress Dorothy Tredwell going to church. Warmly wrapped, she went in the cutter, driven by the hired man John.

Perhaps something in the sermon touched the hard old woman's heart; possibly the sight of the happy families filling the church—families swollen at this season to abnormal size by the annual gathering of loved ones from far and near—brought home to her a new realization of the miserable loneliness of her old age. At all events, she was conscious of suffering mentally as she never had before, for at last the doubt had risen in her mind whether her unhappy condition was not of her own making instead of a mysterious dispensation of Providence which had afflicted her with exceptionally disobedient and unfeeling children, the latter being the view she had long cultivated. "Pardon and forgive me, O God, if the fault has been mine," she moaned while walking slowly from the gate to her gloomy and cheerless home. Sighing, she opened the front door; then stood transfixed by astonishment. It seemed to her that she heard echoing in the hall musical peals of childish laughter. She stood listening in doubting wonder. Yes, the laughter was real, and with it mingled Sister Sally's aged treble, prattling baby talk in the parlor. Cautiously she glided to and peered through the door, which stood a little ajar.

Sally sat upon the floor, embracing a sturdy golden haired little child that was patting with its fat hands her withered cheeks and laughing loudly.

"Children always loved her better than me. Even my own did so, I believe," jealously thought the hungry hearted woman at the door.

Then a fresh, melodious voice full of a mother's tenderness called from the unseen part of the room behind the door: "Come, pet; back to mamma, Ransom. Come now."

Mistress Tredwell gasped and pressed a hand upon her heart at the hearing of that voice, and something dimmed her sight so that she could hardly see the baby, with anxiety in his blue eyes and laughter still wreathing his cherry lips, swaying, balancing, venturing slowly step by step his great feat of toddling across the floor. The old lady threw open the door, and with steps almost as unsteady as the child's tottered to the little fellow, fell upon her knees and clasped him to her breast, sobbing, "God has forgiven me!"

"Oh, mother, mother! I'm so glad!" cried the young woman, Priscilla herself, kneeling to embrace her two dear ones, while Ransom, evidently thinking it all excellent play, crowed with delight and cuddled close to the elder woman, making believe to escape capture by mamma.

"I was just determined, mamma, that you should see baby. I didn't believe you could and stay angry with me," said Priscilla when the excitement of greeting was a little calmed.

"You have named him after your father?"

"Yes, mamma. Nathan wanted to as much as I did. Nathan is real good, mamma. Indeed he is. And I want you to forgive him too."

"Gladly, my child! I wish he were here."

"He will be in a minute. He's sitting in the barn waiting for his welcome."

"Let him wait no longer."

Aunt Sally, nimbly almost as in the days of her youth, ran out to call him. When he was brought and his welcome assured, Sally asked, "Now, Dorothy, wouldn't you like to know about the others?"

"Yes, Sally, I would."

"Thank God, it has come to you at last! Here are letters and Thanksgiving greetings from both. They're too far off to come, but send their love. And there's a picture of Rebecca's two children. They do look sort of shameless, but her husband is consul in a hot country, where, she says, the children all go around that way, even in November."

"Oh, Priscilla!" exclaimed her mother, "if I had only known you were coming! We have got out of the way of having Thanksgivings, and there isn't a bite in the house fit to eat today."

"I'll see if I can't scare up something," said Sally hopefully, going out to see, and presently, when she called them into the dining room, the big table, with all its four extra leaves, was seen to be none too large for the dinner she had "scared up." There were a splendid salmon and a magnificent turkey, so big, brown and fragrant that the mouth watered at the sight, and there were mince and pumpkin pies and what not else that is sacred to New England's happiest festal occasion. And when Mistress Dorothy saw it all, she cried to Sally: "Oh, you old conspirator! Of course you knew in advance, and this explains why you've been over at Mrs. Green's nearly all the time for three days. But I forgive you."

BLOOD WINE
Cures Bright's Disease

John T. Foster.

Kidney diseases, including Bright's, is gaining an alarming foothold upon Americans, and the percentage of deaths all over the country in 1902 shows a big increase. The slightest tendency to weakness of the kidneys, indicated by lameness, soreness, pains, bearing-down sensation across the small of the back, cloudy, colored, having a sediment or otherwise unnatural appearance of the urine, is sufficient proof that something is wrong. If you take "Blood Wine" for your kidneys it will astonish you with its quick and thorough action. It has a specific action on the kidneys simultaneously with its effect upon the blood, and will check an approaching disease of the kidneys, as well as drive off an old chronic case.

Mrs. M. E. Thayer of North Brookfield, Mass., says:

"I have been troubled with rheumatism and my kidneys for more than ten years, been treated without much help. My back ached until I was almost crazy, with swelling of the feet and limbs. I tried your 'Blood Wine,' and the first bottle helped me. After taking the second bottle my back quit aching, and the fifth bottle brought about a thorough cure."

Mr. John T. Foster, of Manchester, N. H., speaks as thousands speak:

"'Blood Wine' is truly a most remarkable medicine. In my case its work has been little short of a miracle. For some time I suffered with rheumatism and kidney disease, of a most painful and advanced type. I tried about everything, without relief, and expected the same result from 'Blood Wine,' but fortunately for me when I struck 'Blood Wine,' I struck the Rock of Gibraltar. It stood my severe test and conquered my trouble and today I am a well man, due wholly to this great medicine. To my mind there is absolutely nothing that will compare with it, and I have no hesitation in advising any one in ill health to give it a thorough test."

Fifty cents a bottle.

THANKSGIVING ....POETRY

BACK to the home of childhood,
Though scattered far and wide,
Back to the dear old kitchen—
Yes, back to your mother's side.
Come, kiss her wrinkled forehead,
Her hair, as white as snow,
And sit down on her old stool,
As in the long ago.

While father bends above you
Weak with the weight of years,
His trembling voice with gladness,
His dim eyes filled with tears.
To both the greatest pleasure
The year brings on its way
Is this: The glad homecoming
Upon Thanksgiving day.

Once more the rooms re-echo
From kitchen, stairs and hall,
The sound of old time voices
And merry dinner call,
While many sweet grandchildren,
With laughter light and gay,
Come pressing round the table
This glad Thanksgiving day.

THE GLAD HOMECOMING.

So come, ye sons and daughters,
From restless city strife;
Come ere you lose your relish
For the quiet joys of life;
Come back, ye roving children,
From prairies far and wide
And cluster round the hearthstone
Once more at eventide.

Take up your song of childhood
And sing it o'er again;
Forget that ye are matrons
Or business loving men,
And if your eyes grow misty
Rejoice that it is so;
A heart sincerely tender
Is the purest one to know.

Remember, with your loved ones
Life's lamp doth feebly burn;
Your parents may not linger
To greet a late return.
Forget them not, though patient;
Oh, come now while you may!
Praise God; rejoice together
On this Thanksgiving day.
—Good Housekeeping.

Soliloquy of a Turkey.

I know that Thanksgiving day's most here,
And it makes me long to fly,
For I've reached my prime, and it's mighty clear
That it's time for me to die.

I saw the head of the house come out,
And he smiled as he gazed at me,
And he cried aloud that there was no doubt
What a comfortable meal I'd be.

Oh, I've got to go! And it gives me a fit,
Though it isn't so much for my life
That I care about, but he can't carve a bit,
And I've got to be hacked by his wife.
—New York Herald.

Sad Time For Them.

Of what are the turkeys thinking
Out yonder in the yard,
With their red eyes sadly blinking?
Do they think their fate is hard?
Are they on life reflecting
And to hear their final call
Each moment now expecting?
No; turkeys don't think at all.

Thanksgiving Trust.

Lord, I give thanks!
Last year, thou knowest, my best ambitions failed;
My back with scourgings of defeat was flailed;
My eyes felt oft the sharp salt wash of tears;
No guerdon blessed the tireless toil of years;
Fast in the snares my helpless feet were tied,
Yet in my woes thou didst with me abide.
Lord, I give thanks!
—Susie M. Best in Lippincott's.

His Preference.

"What portion of the fowl do you prefer?"
"Oh, anything but the Napoleon, sir!"
"What do you mean?" asked Carver, with a start.
"I mean I do not want the bony part."
—Detroit Free Press.

An Unknown Quantity.

She searched through the lexicon once and again,
And her face wore sad lines of misgiving.
"I was seeking," she said, with an accent of pain,
"The Spanish for our word 'Thanksgiving.'"
—Boston Journal.

Not In a Good Set.

"No," exclaimed the mother turkey, "I would prefer my children not to associate with those incubator chicks."

"Because they are so heedless and don't know how to feather their own nests?" inquired the duck.

"No, it isn't that so much I have brooded over," replied the turkey, "but there's something so artificial about them."

However, when the incubator chicks heard this they thought of the funeral baked meats of Thanksgiving and remarked significantly, "Death levels all ranks."—New York Journal.

PEPSIN SYRUP CO.
Monticello, Ill.

Chicago, Ill., December 15, 1902.

Gentlemen,—I consider

Dr. Caldwell's (Laxative) Syrup Pepsin

by far the most reliable and efficacious remedy I have ever known for dyspepsia and kindred stomach disorders. Mild and gentle in its action, it does not simply relieve, but cures permanently. It does not nauseate, as so many medicines are apt to do, but can be used in severe cases when almost anything else would distress one. Several of my friends who have used it have had the same very satisfactory results I have, and I therefore feel it is well worthy of highest endorsement.

Very truly yours,
M. C. DALTON, 311 Illinois St.

relieves neuralgic and other nervous pains. It relieves them quickly. It is absolutely harmless. By quieting the nerves, it removes the cause of all nervous diseases. When your head feels as if thousands of pins were sticking in it, when your night's rest is broken by those awful neuralgic pains, when, on account of your awful suffering, you become morose and cross, when you are tired of your very existence, when, in short, you are in the grasp of that fiendish disease, Neuralgia, buy a box of Neuralgyline.

Take one pellet. Twenty minutes after you have taken it, your pains will have vanished as if by magic. You only have yourself to blame now, if you continue to have Neuralgic pains, for Neuralgyline relieves pain permanently.

TESTIMONIALS.—Every sale of Neuralgyline insures a satisfied customer, who by telling of its merits, makes new customers. Mr. E. PELL, Druggist, Canton, Ohio.

BLOOD DISEASE CURED.

If you ever contracted any Blood or Private Disease, you are never safe until the virus or poison has been eradicated from the system. Don't be satisfied with a "patch up" by some family doctor. Our New Method is Guaranteed to Cure or No Pay. No Names Used without Written consent.

Cured When all Else Failed

"Could I live my early life over, this testimonial would not be necessary, though I was no more sinful than thousands of other young men. Early indiscretions, later excesses, exposure to contagious diseases all helped to break down my system. When I commenced to realize my condition I was almost frantic. Doctor after doctor treated me but only gave me relief—not a cure. Hot Springs helped me, but did not cure me. The symptoms always returned. Mercury and Potash drove the poison into my system instead of driving it out. I bless the day your New Method Treatment was recommended to me. I investigated who you were first, and finding you had over 25 years' experience and responsible financially, I gave you my case under a guarantee. You cured me permanently, and in six years there has not been a sore, pain, ulcer or any other symptom of the blood disease."
